

realitybites

"It (Linux) is a cancer that attaches itself in an intellectual-property sense to everything it touches"

Steve Ballmer, CEO Microsoft, in another one of Microsoft's tirades against Linux.

Sounds a lot like an MS Word macro virus

"We are targeting fence-sitters who have stayed away from owning a mobile because of a perception that it's expensive"

Sanjay Kapoor, CEO, Bharti Cellular, talking about their efforts to increase the number of mobile users in India by lowering prices.

It isn't too expensive initially. And once you get used to it, you won't mind too much

"Unlike those other products, we offer a compelling package of hardware, software and service"

Rob Bartels, GM for Product Development, Sony Electronics, on why Sony is launching its eVilla Network Entertainment Center at a time when others like 3Com, Netplance and Gateway have given up on their Internet appliances.

There's one thing you really need to remember... IT'S A SONY

Mastering MP3

Thomson Multimedia, the company that released the original MP3 music format, has released an upgraded version called MP3Pro. Files in the new format are backward compatible and will work with existing software and devices that are designed for MP3 files.

Developed by Stockholm-based Coding Technologies,

Illustrations: Farzana Cooper

the new format will produce better quality sound at lower bitrates. That is, you can get CD quality sound at just 64 Kbps. You can download a demo version of the MP3Pro encoder from www.codingtechnologies.com.

Mobile Toonz!

A couple of comic stars have become very popular with users of Club Nokia. More than 3,000 Europeans religiously log into this free Nokia mobile Internet site to catch the latest adventures of Flip and Mick. This duo, created by Helsinki-based Moving Entertainment, find themselves trapped inside the pixelated world of mobile phones. About 400 episodes involving the two characters have been created and the company expects to see readership increase to 50,000 by end 2001.

thermometer

Hot Audiogalaxy

Alternative to Napster that guides people to free copies of almost any popular song
Linux

Leading TV technology companies are working together to design Linux-based set-top boxes

Cold WAP

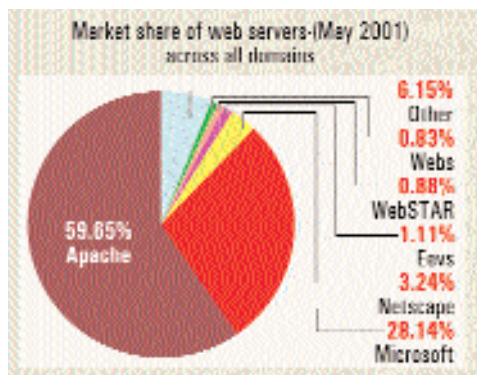

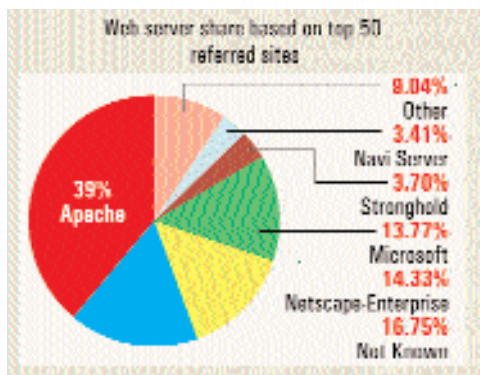

After GSM Association announced plans to introduce a Mobile Services Initiative to replace WAP
Web 'zines
After Suck.com and Feedmag.com shut down

thumbnail

WEB SERVER USAGE

Market share analysis of Web servers based on two parameters:
Top 50 referred sites (based on how many sites link to each server) and across all domains

Source: cyberatlas.internet.com

◆ IE 6.0 will be the first to support P3P (Platform Privacy Preferences) ◆ Japanese government orders takedown of school murder game