

MEDAL OF HONOR ALLIED ASSAULT

Step into World War II and test your grit within one of the best FPS games ever Medal of Honor: Allied Assault (MoH) is a first person shooter that takes you back in time to the European battlefields of World War II. You play Lieutenant Mike Powell, a highly skilled member of The Office of Strategic Services. The game is based on the realistic settings of World War II, and sticks to its classic roots of the PlayStation version.

SINGLE PLAYER TIPS

Use quick save!

Each of the six main missions is divided into a number of sub-objectives and the game automatically saves once you accomplish these. There are places where Quick Save becomes invaluable, for instance, the third mission, Operation Overlord. Trying to get off the landing craft and up the beach alive is something that takes a bit of time, as you gauge the right path to take, running between tank traps, up to the shingle bank and to cover.

In mission five there's a superbly atmospheric, sniper-ridden town that will also demand extensive Quick Save usage.

Stealth is health

A stealthy approach is best. Remember, you have a huge advantage if you see the enemy. Listen for audio clues to pinpoint where the enemy is lurking. If you hear shuffling feet nearby, chances are an enemy is not too far away from you. If you have a silencer in your inventory, use it while making your way to the level objective. That way, you won't alert soldiers to your position. Don't stand in one place 'duking' it out, and never go out in the open. Keep behind structures and line up your kills from a safe distance when possible.

MULTIPLAYER TIPS

MoH features all the standard modes of play, Free for All, Deathmatch, Objective based Matches, and Team Deathmatch. There are around 10-12 multiplayer maps, including the famous D-Day landing map. Here are some basic tips to get you started.

- Never stop moving unless you have

Hidden Level

Contained inside Medal of Honor: Allied Assault is a secret map called 'm410.bsp'. It's a unique map, with an open terrain and a whole bunch of dogs. Here's how you can access this map—When you enter the game's console, key in 'maplist' and select the map cover. Stop to shoot at enemy snipers, and you're most likely to get rushed from another side by the infantry, packing a submachine gun or bolt-action rifle.

'm410.bsp'. You'll play a hidden mission not found elsewhere in the game. One little warning though: do not enter the water! It's impossible to come out of it and you'll only end up getting stuck.

- Grab health whenever you can—which means the 50-point First Aid kit left behind every time a player is killed.

- Keep an eye on the ammunition counter. Make sure you have enough health and are fully loaded before rushing into battle.

- Radio commands work better than you might think. Screaming "Grenade" is sure to have everyone on your team looking for cover.

- Unless you're the last person left on your team, don't try and be the hero. You won't last long if you try to take on a platoon of soldiers by yourself. Teamwork is important in Medal of Honor, so be a part of one.
