

170 Escape News

184 Tabloid Tech

Digital Leisure

Technology Beyond Work

MODS AND ENDS

Madhusudan Mukerjee

What's a game without a good mod? That new weapon, that great landscape, the crazy new characters and the more exciting levels — they all make your favourite games so much more exciting. If you're a gamer and are wondering which of the newest and most exciting mods and map-packs are up for grabs, quit wondering, and let us assist you. Here's where you'll find the lowdown on 20 of the most popular additions to the mod-world, guaranteed to amplify the thrills of your gaming life.

Half-Life Operation Nova

Operation Nova is a single-player episode for Half-Life 1 developed by Ben Greenwood. It features a storyline that runs alongside events in the original game, with voice-acting from experienced voice actors. Just released on September 14 2008, Half-Life Operation Nova is basically a single-player episode for Half-Life 1, which occurs during the events already featured in the original Half-Life 1. As a player, you are a character called John Skinner. The military mistake you for Freeman because you wear a suit similar to his.

The artillery stays the same

The aim here is to destroy the surface-to-air missile launcher, which has been brought in to destroy a delivery rocket being launched by Freeman. The episode gets a realistic touch with professional voice

Operation Nova makes Half-Life more full actors lending their voices to the characters in the game, while not losing all the great graphics of the original.

Zero Hour Battlefields: Map Pack #1

The Zero Hour Battlefields: Map Pack #1 is a single player map released on June 26th 2008, developed for the famous Command and Conquer Generals Zero Hour. This is a map pack with 10 maps, nine single player ones and one multiplayer. The nine single player ones are titled Area 82, Beach Head and Hill, Dangerous Cargo, Feudal Warlords, North Korea, Parking Lot, Russian Front, Sniper's Haven and Tigris River. The Multiplayer map is titled Dangerous Cargo.

Command and Conquer