Fusion-io ioXtreme

Solid state drives might take a while before they go mainstream, but Fusion-io doesn't really seem to care. The ioXtreme is a PCI-Express x4 card unlike other SATA-based SSDs. The limitations by SATA aren't applicable, so Fusion-io comfortably claims that the drive is a lot faster than the others. The performance numbers are as extreme as the name and so is the price tag. It's just Rs. 45,000 ($895) for 80 GB of space.

Klipsch Heritage

It's 2009 and Klipsch has launched their Heritage speakers for the second time. The first time was back in 1946. The top of the line model in the series is the Klipschorn which is priced at £6,000 or Rs. 4,75,000. A 15-inch woofer is at the heart of the system. You'll need to spend a little more on people to help take the speakers up to your apartment. This is after all, an 80-kg set that stands more than a metre in height
