WE SAY

At a price point of ₹5,500, it is an affordable processor for daily office and internet work. For those who want to play around with over-clocking without shelling out of your pockets, this is a good option. For a little more, an Athlon II X4 945 would make better sense.

7.0

Gave good performance in most tests. Crysis gave an average of 288 fps at 1024x768 resolution with low detailing. Also, Cinebench R10 gave 13,600 for CPU rendering. Great value for money offering at just ₹10,600 which is much cheaper than Intel's equivalent offering.

WE SAY

This is a light internet security suite and has a very impressive dock-based interface. At ₹1,250, it is quite economical. eScan Remote Support facility allows a tech support representative to access your system remotely and trouble shoot, an interesting feature.

6.5

Features like safe web, application scanning and Facebook wall scanner are interesting and cover a wider spectrum. It is a good antivirus-internet security combo. At ₹1,220, it is economically priced and you get a host of unique features and a refined user interface.
