Ease of Use

Much to our satisfaction, all the speakers came with colour coded cables—except the Typhoon, which can be a pain to set up. Setting up the speakers was a snap, with no problems that a quick reference to the leaflet couldn't solve.

Most of the speakers that made to our Test Centre, came without remotes, and only had controls for the subwoofer. Though the Adcom, Mercury, Frontech, Artis, Typhoon and Intex speakers had the controls on the front of the subwoofer, the Creative, Philips and Odyssey speakers had theirs behind. Controls on subwoofers are very irritating, especially if you place your woofer on the ground, behind your cabinet, or some place just as inaccessible. The saving grace is that the
