

We don't yet know whether this beauty will become the Enzo Ferrari of the PC gaming world. What we do know is that it has some of the world's best Force Feedback effects, an 8 way D-pad, 9 action buttons, progressive gas and brake control with two wheel-mounted levers and stable analogue foot pedals, two wheel-mounted gearshift levers, and a central clamping system. Besides, it also has a radio frequency unit to control the gadget, so you can might as well say goodbye to the messy wires.

For a mere matter of a yet-to-be-decided price point (knowledgeable sources say $100, or Rs 4,600), you also get the official Ferrari logo on the wheel. Why? Because, my dear sir, this is the exact replica of the original Enzo Ferrari wheel!

Smell burning rubber, already?
