

Jewellery for your Phone!

Here's looking at some eyeball-grabbing accessories for your cell

Varun Dubey

Are you one of the millions of cell phone fanatics who go into depression if the cell doesn't buzz for a while? Is your cell phone your loved one? Do you want to pamper and spoil it? We take you through the myriad accessories available to dress up your beloved and enhance its functionalities.

Standard Bundles

Most cell phones today come in a fairly bulky package, which contains a charger and a vanilla hands-free set. More expensive models come with driver disks and data cables for synchronisation with your laptop or PC. These, however, are just the basics. A little more investment, and you can get a lot more functionality and convenience.

The Cosmetics

The first thing that people change on their phones is the face-plate—Nokia calls them XPress-On covers. The Nokia 3220, for example, has Wave Covers—wave them in the air and they flash a message you have written on them!

There are hundreds of face-plate options available that let you personalise the look of your phone. Though the majority of face-plates will only fit Nokia phones, alternatives for other brands such as Sony Ericsson are available. If you have the money, your phone can take on a new avatar everyday—perhaps matching your outfit for the day. The costs? As little as Rs 60 in the grey market, for the popular mid-range Nokias, to as much as Rs 2,500 for an original Sony Ericsson P800 face-plate.

So, what next? You can now choose from a whole range of stickers and cool flickering LEDs, which can be stuck behind your phone, near the antenna. These will jazz up your phone, and without burning a hole in your pocket—the LEDs start at as little as Rs 30. If you can afford them, Swarovski crystal embedded tattoos will give your phone the uniqueness you yearn for.

Free Your Hands!

Now that your cell phone is all jazzy-looking with blinking lights and colours that border on the outrageous, you probably never want to have to pull it out of your pocket, except for special occasions or when the lights go out! The solution? Go hands-free!