

Bluff

YOUR WAY THROUGH

Web Designers

Every notable company has a Web presence today, and they all have "Web designers" as employees. Here's a small list of words that will help you better understand what these Web designers are chattering about.

Cookie: Small text files that your browser stores. They contain data such as passwords and login information.

Usage: Set the page cookie to expire after an hour. People have complained that our session is too short!

Plug-in: A software that attaches itself to your browser in order to give the browser additional functionality, such as playing Macromedia Flash or Apple Quicktime movies.
Usage: I wish I had a plug-in for IE that would plug in my coffee machine at work!

Flash: A Macromedia standard for animations with small file sizes. A plug-in for a browser to allow such animations to be displayed.
Usage: I'm looking for a job again! The boss wasn't pleased with the Flash I embedded in the presentation. Personally, I thought the 83-year-old man flashing was really funny!

Rollover: An action or text that displays when you roll your mouse pointer over a hyperlink.

Usage: Making rollovers in Dreamweaver is so easy! I wish Macromedia would make software to teach my stupid dog how to roll over just as easily!

Hyperlink: A link in a page that points to a page or file.

Usage: The Web site was perfect...except we forgot to hyperlink the pages on the home page!

Bot Friendly/Search Engine Optimisation (SEO): Search engine bots read pages without graphics. Web sites need to be tweaked for these bots to get a higher listing.
Usage: No sir, our site is most definitely bot friendly. We spent hours on search engine optimisation. It's just that with the recent scandals, it's impossible to get your site MissJammu.com to number one right now.

Of PDA Phones And Mac Minis

Keep a skimpily clad Mallika Sherawat in a room and a PalmOne Treo 600 on the table adjacent to her, and you can bet your last buck that our Test Centre guys will pick the PDA phone. For them, the feel of a PDA phone is like, well, actually let's skip the details.

It was no surprise, therefore, that not a single person from the Test Centre decided to share their collection (and so what if it was temporary?) of PDA phones with the rest of the crowd at Digit. Selfish pigs, we call them. Plus there was the O2 XDA II Mini, a smaller version of the original beauty. We must admit that looks-wise, the Mini is not a patch on its big brother, but an O2 is an O2. Sanket Naik fell in love with the Nokia 7710, a product he refused to let go for quite some time, and when he had to do the inevitable, you could see quite a few unshed tears.

If it were one of those K serials,

Sanket could have got an automatic casting as a harassed son-in-law. Last heard, he was still in mourning because of the Nokia 7710. "Wait until April," he told his sympathisers, "when I get my raise!" We will wait.

Then, there was the Apple Mac Mini, which sent Senior Writer, Ahmed Shaikh into raptures. But that's another story!

DIGIT DIARY

MULTIPURPOSE MOBILES

Cell Phones Turn Into Golf Clubs

The local branch of British mobile giant Vodafone recently unveiled the V603SH. It has been billed as the first phone in Japan to respond to movements—and it will let users perform basic mobile functions via programmed shakes and jerks. But the appeal of the 142-gm V603SH goes beyond that.

The phone can be used as a golf club—users putt with the phone, then look back at the screen to see how well they did. It can also be moved like a gun for the shooter game 'House of the Dead'.

Both these novel uses for the phone could mean merrier times on the Tokyo subway, where people often sit glued to their phones.

TALK ABOUT WEIRD!

Top 10 Weird Stuff On eBay

Talk about inspired selling! Flip through eBay's 'Weird Stuff' section

Original Bullet Holes, along with stand, were up for sale on eBay for a taste of the wackiest ways to make an extra buck.

The ThinkDigit Forum recently received news of an extremely unusual item up for sale on eBay—a man was auctioning his wife's PMS, which, he claimed, "is in excellent condition. You won't find a more authentic or volatile PMS on the market. My wife's PMS is always right... wins every argument... can fight your wife's or girlfriend's PMS with certain victory..."

Scouring eBay led to the discovery of many more such inspired sellers. Here's our selection of Top Ten Wacky Items:

1. Soul For Sale: A 26-year old artist from Newcastle-upon-Tyne (UK) actually sold his own soul on eBay for $16.95 (Rs 737).
2. Kangaroo Scrotum Pouches: Better known as 'The Golden pouch'—genuine Kangaroo Scrotum Pouches from Australia.
3. Ad Space on Forehead: A 20-year-old from Omaha, Nebraska (US) was selling advertising space on his forehead.