MOVIE MADNESS

Even multi-million dollar movies make silly mistakes when depicting technology. Here are a few...

Robert Sovereign-Smith

Those of us who watched War Of The Worlds were captivated by its special effects. Almost everyone muttered some sort of expletive at the end, angered by the quick and hurried ending. "Bacteria killed them all" was a wholly unexpected finale—perhaps one of the most anti-climactic endings of all time—except for the few who had read the book first!

Movies have this magical power over people. Music is what perhaps comes closest in this regard, but even the power of music pales in comparison to the emotions that movies are able to elicit from even the most stoic. Women and macho-men alike cried like babies when they saw that little red cape covering one of the corpses in Schindler's List; we all laughed whole-heartedly at Jim Carrey's antics in Liar, Liar, and every Indian learnt more about the Mahatma by watching Gandhi than we ever did in school!
