

The contacts he established here and the knowledge he gained laid the foundation for the setting up of LNGWorldwide.com.

Trivedi reflects, "I am passionate about the subject. Moreover, LNG holds a lot of promise for the future as well."

LNGWorldwide.com

LNGWorldwide.com is a dedicated portal for the global LNG industry. Apart from Trivedi, there are two professionals from the Middle East who have contributed substantially towards the site. The site offers weekly news round-ups, trade summaries, interviews with industry leaders, and information on LNG producers, LNG consumers, LNG marketers and other associated industries. There are also comprehensive analytical reports as well as summarised compilations on LNG.

This information is privileged, and is therefore available only to subscribers, who pay an annual subscription fee of $1,000 (Rs 43,500). Subscribers receive a monthly newsletter.

"I started LNGWorldwide.com once I had some time when I was in between jobs. But now it is something I love to do. It's an avenue for me to do what I want, in the way I want, sans restrictions," says Trivedi.

Growing Clientele

The four major oil companies in the world are Shell, ChevronTexaco, ExxonMobil and Total. These companies generally tie up with other companies at the local level in various countries.

Instances of such tie-ups include Shell Hajira, Persian LNG, and so on. Such are the companies likely to be interested in the information available at Trivedi's site.

com's clients comprise five Indian public sector units dealing mostly in oil and energy, and one American client. Talks are in progress with two Indian private sector firms. The Nuclear Thermal Power Corporation (NTPC) and Petronet LNG Ltd are part of LNGWorldwide.com's clientele.

An official from NTPC says, "LNGWorldwide.com provides us with exhaustive information about recent developments in the LNG space. The newsletter gives detailed data on each country. After receiving information from them for a few months, we decided to subscribe."

"Our fuel management group makes the most use of the data we get from this Web site. It gives us a fair idea of the development opportunities in local and international markets and the feasibility of business expansion."

What's In Store

The worldwide natural gas market is growing fast. Trivedi says, "The worldwide market for natural gas is expected to increase by 200 per cent by the year 2010. There is a serious shortage of reliable information on the topic. With LNGWorldwide.com, we hope to bridge this gap." Trivedi also plans to start a portal that deals with natural gas in depth, not just LNG.

"Currently, I am the only one who writes the content. I need to build a team to help me in this endeavour. The problem is, there are few people well versed with the subject and who can also write about it."

Trivedi also hopes to tie up with international news agencies to help provide LNGWorldwide.com with first-hand and privileged information. Collaborating with banks and financial institutions to bring in funds is also on the cards. So is getting investors for the site to help him better serve his clientele.

Like we said earlier, Kamlesh Trivedi has capitalised on his knowledge by taking it to the Web. This goes to show that the Web is not just a place to showcase one's talent—it's also a place where if you've got something that's in demand, you can make a viable business out of it. ☐
