

Finally GOOGLE got a competitor.....!!!

gagan007

Analogue Novice
Hi,

chk out this link
<http://beta.previewseek.com/>

Superb Search Engine!Perhaps going forward we will be using this more than Google ??

Also preview seek is more intelligent than google! You type 'Mercury' in google and it will also show you results of Planet mercury even if you are looking for info on the element called Mercury. Where as in PreviewSeek first you get different categories of mercury (Planet, Element and what not!) and from there you can proceed only into that category. Even a search for DSC 80, a sony digi cam gave astonishing result sets with also categories on left side to preview its reviews or to buy it.

Good luck PreviewSeek, check it out at beta.previewseek.com . Note that it is still in beta!

No source, just got a mail.

linfi

Digitized!

Location: Navi Mumbai

not a bad one. gud luck to PreviewSeek and thanks gagan for the info.

Febians

Analogue Novice

Location: Bombalore:)

"Categoric" / "Clustered" search engines are not new....

www.lycos.com
www.vivismo.com
www.ask.com
www.teoma.com

will all give u the categories for "Mercury"

~Phenom~

Warmed-Up Nerd

Location: CYBERYARD

wow,

its great.

I m really impressed by the search results.

Vrnoormd

Analogue Novice

Location: Vellore

Good one, Little Slow than Google

Digit Helped Me Buy

When I bought my first PC two years ago, I had no one to guide me. I was confused between branded and assembled PCs. I also didn't know what configuration to buy. I couldn't pinpoint what my needs were, I didn't know about support by the dealer and manufacturers, driver availability, and last but not least, the warranty.

And then arrived the December 2005 issue with your Buyers Guide. It provided me with all the useful information, especially important for those who will buy PCs or hardware for the first time. Such articles train us to tackle dealers and makes us aware of the market scenario. Your effort is indeed praiseworthy.

Parag Kalra
Nagpur

Dear Parag,
Thanks so much for your appreciation. It has always been our goal to give our readers the complete picture and scale up their knowledge on not just the latest technology but also contemporary market trends.

—Associate Editor

Our Youngest-Ever Reader?

In last month's issue, you said Amritanshu was possibly the youngest reader of Digit. I'd like to tell you that I've been reading Digit since I was in the 5th standard! And for the last five years, there isn't an issue that has bored me. I anxiously wait for your every copy—but I receive my copy late!

Anay Somvanshi
via e-mail

Dear Anay,
I am indeed surprised to know that you picked your first copy of Digit at that young age—you're a prime example of India's great IT potential! It is kids like you who build their IT quotient early enough to gear up for bigger challenges later.

— Associate Editor

All Thanks To Digit

I thank the Digit team for helping me win the Microsoft Innovative Teacher Leadership Award (ITLA) 2005. I am a government teacher, and with your help I've remained updated and experimented with my computer, which led me to win the MS ITLA 2005 award and a chance to visit Seoul (South Korea). 10 teachers from all over India were selected to attend the Asia Pacific Regional Innovative Teachers Summit in Seoul. They all use IT in their profession for better teaching and learning Process. I have created a Web forum for teachers—<http://itla2005.bravehost.com>.

Gopal Veernala
Andhra Pradesh

Excellent DVD Offer!

Thank you very much for the December special issue. Your additional DVDs offer for Rs 50 is fantastic. I am sure even if you had charged more, lots of people would have taken you up on your offer. I am not into computers, but I use them in my everyday work and I subscribe to Digit to keep myself updated on products and happenings in the industry. It provides me with all the necessary details while not being overly technical, so as a layman I can understand the content.

Kiran Bhat
via e-mail

Dear Kiran,
Thanks for acknowledging our efforts in reaching out the Terminator 2 + Discovery documentary DVD and Microsoft game CD at a nominal price to our subscribers. If you calculate the original market price of these two, it turns out to be more than 15 times of what we've asked for. And as our CEO stated in his letter to all subscribers, the Rs 50 was only sought to cover the additional cost of procurement and shipping.

—Associate Editor

Digitised At 11!

I've been a regular reader of Digit since I was 11. I eagerly wait for each month's copy. Your e-books, movie trailers and wallpapers are my favourite. I have built up my own library using your material.

The December issue was great. Collecting so much information in just one month should be very difficult—hats off to your team!

I am also looking for the full version of Doom 3 and Virtual DJ. Please see if you can provide it. And tell me how I can get to know the results of the Digit Contest Carnival.

Tanul Saxena
Kota

Dear Tanul,
This month we seem to be getting more and more letters from our young readers. It seems last month's letter has inspired a lot of you to write back to us. As always, it's a pleasure to hear from all of you!