

HP fights counterfeit toner cartridges in India.

58%* of customers buy counterfeits unknowingly.

Counterfeit cartridges are those cartridges which have been illegally packaged to resemble genuine HP cartridges. This usually involves putting a reman/refill cartridge into a box that closely resembles genuine HP packaging, which can deceive customers into paying higher prices, and believing that the print cartridge is an original HP product. HP views this as a serious threat to itself and the customers, and is actively pursuing action against parties who manufacture or sell counterfeit products. To protect its customers, HP runs a Global Supplies Anti-counterfeit program (ACF) to raise awareness among partners, customers and local authorities.

Counterfeit Seizures

HP Anti-counterfeit team boosted its drive against counterfeiting in the first half of 2013. From January 1st to April 30th, 2013, approximately 100 enforcement actions across India were conducted by the police, whereby counterfeit ink and toner supplies worth USD 810,000 approximately were seized, along with packages, labels, machines and equipment. The raids also lead to more than 80 people being arrested for indulgence in counterfeiting.

How to spot a counterfeit cartridge

You should look for these warning signs - missing logos on packaging, missing or broken security seals, missing standard outer wrapping and missing or broken security tear strip.

HP's three-tier security system protects you from fraud.

Mobile Authentication
Scan the QR code with your smartphone to validate as authentic HP.

Security Seal
Tilt the security seal for the presence of a shifting image.

Online
To validate, visit hp.com/go/ok and enter the serial number from the label.
