We look around us and see that most of us seem to have our noses securely embedded in our phones/tablets all the time. All that anyone seems to want to talk about is Nexus/Android this, Windows Phone that and iOS the other... Technology is, and always will be, more than the personal gadgets you spend your lives with. Your phone or tablet is merely the last line in a rather long chain of invisible devices and technologies, working tirelessly to deliver the experience we take for granted today.

At Digit all of us have worked towards one simple goal: bettering India through technology. We look at our readers as the true influencers of this nation, and that's why we've always tried to spark an interest in you, get you to start a conversation or a train of thought, give you a gentle push in the right direction, ask you to think out of the box... you get the drift.

With this month's cover story, we're asking you to take a break from the gadget hype and consumerist obsession, and realise the importance of the invisible. There are unsung heroes of the technology world and it's those very
