GOOGLE+

Google is trying to compete with Facebook tooth and nail with its recently revamped user interface for Google+. The list of new features give it a fighting chance at dethroning the leader. The new interface resembles Pinterest, and the features are quite impressive. Let's explore the new face of Google+ with some useful tips and tricks to make your experience even better.

Sharing tips Share a post privately

Google+ has a hidden feature which allows you to share your posts privately. It is done by disabling reshares, which means that your post will be only visible to people with whom it is shared and nobody else can share it further. To do it, go to "Share What's New" box, then click drop-down button under 'To' and select Disable reshares.

Notify a particular circle

When you post something, you can let people from particular Circle(s) know about it. To do it, go to "Share What's New" box and under To include those Circles which you want to notify.

Format text on-the-go

Instead of using simple plain text in your post you can use formatted text to make it look more attractive. Formatted text in Google+ only includes bold, italic, strikethrough, bullets and not fonts, font-size and colors. To get bold text type your text between two asterisks, to get italic text, _type your text between two underscores_, to get strikethrough text -type your text between two hyphens- and to get bullets use [ALT] + 0, 1, 2, 3, 4.. etc.

Know the number of views a photo gets

View notifications in a separate stream

When you click the small bell in Google+, it opens a notification box which shows notifications in it. You can expand its ability by opening it in a separate news stream. This new ability will show you who has +named you and who sent you a private post. To view it, right-click on notifications icon > open link in new tab.

Bookmark posts for future reading

If there are a lot of posts in your news stream, then you can bookmark them to read them later. Since there is no standalone feature to do this, first, create an empty circle called 'Bookmarks' then use share button on the post and share it with Bookmarks circle. Later in the news stream, you can filter Bookmarks circle to show all posts from it.

Mobile app of Google+ has ability to auto upload photos as you take it. So if you take series of photographs and they're auto-uploaded, Google+ uses its Highlights feature to pick out the best shot and automatically hides the rest. Highlights feature, hides shots which are blurry, duplicates, overexposed, etc.

Automatically make a gif from your photos

Google+ provides an easy way to make a gif of your images and upload it. Take multiple shots of a scene with same background and upload them, Google+ will stitch them together to make a stop motion gif automatically.

Make a panorama from your photos

Take few photos of a panoramic view and Google+ will stitch

Share only with Bookmarks circle
