New hybrids from HP, Google Smartwatch, Aakash 4 and EA games become unaffordable

Sony Xperia Z Ultra pricing

The Sony Xperia Z Ultra 6.4-inch Android phablet is now available in India via online retailers for Rs. 44,900

✉ The editorial of July 2013 issue was simply great. It was like someone was expressing the state of my mind which I wanted to share with my friends.

Some lines such as "I've had more rational debates.....some apple fans" were so true that I wasn't able to stop myself from sharing them over my social networks.

📧 Thank you Vikash, it means a lot :)

✉ This is my 1st letter to Team Digit. Every month I get ₹800 from my mom as pocket money, of which I "invest" ₹150 on your magazine. She says, "What do you gain by reading this? This is how you waste money?" But who'll tell her that I'm addicted to this magazine. It gives me knowledge about the latest tech devices and helps me in my chosen field of Computer Science. Because of you guys I made a perfect selection for my laptop which I purchased last month. There is no doubt why Digit is The No.1 Technology Magazine and everyone, including me, knows the reason.

But as a Digit lover, it's my responsibility to give you suggestions regarding Digit, so here are some:

1. TED Talks are very useful. Please provide them in the DVDs every month.
2. Provide Fast Tracks to Indian technical industries such as Infosys, TCS, Accenture etc so that students can know about their dream companies.

Finally, I want to say that your online offers are very attractive. I used to buy the magazine online rather than from book-sellers and your delivery service is as fast as Rajdhani Express.

Neeraj Kamra

📧 Thank you so much for your mail. We cannot write Fast Tracks on companies such as Infosys, but we can try and cover them more often. The problem is they're mainly into enterprise and business coding which is outsourced from abroad, while we prefer to keep our focus on the end user and the technologies that affect everyday life.

✉ I could not stop myself from writing a letter to you this time. What an editorial!

Feedback for the July 2013 issue of Digit

Amazing! I like the way you expressed the release of Apple iOS 7. Not only did it have a bigger showcasing, it has higher prices as well that are not easily accessible for a middle class Indian.

I want to tell you that I used to buy Digit from local vendors in 2007, but I wanted an annual subscription. My dream was fulfilled this year when I could subscribe to it from January 2013. I'm amazed and surprised with every issue and eagerly wait for it, especially for the Fast Tracks. This issue's 'Fast Track to Mobile & Laptop Hardware' was my favorite one, because I've done a Hardware Networking course & Mobile Repairing course. As I'm studying in college I work from home. Customers come to me to repair their laptops, desktops, mobiles and tablets.

I want to sincerely thank the Production Team of Digit. Their hard work shows. Each and every issue has been up to the mark and is value for the money we spend for earning knowledge...immense knowledge!

The last Win 8 dedicated issue was of immense help and I'd like to make a note here that the handy 'Fast Track to Windows 8' is easy to carry everywhere.

There's no other magazine like Digit in the world which can provide everything the readers want. I think Team Digit is like Santa Claus and Christmas and the gifts never end.

Finally, as a TY.B.Sc Information Technology student I like the articles on software programming, tutorials for Android development and Maths, and the introduction to Khan Academy. I also liked the 'Fast Track to Intel Architecture' because our colleges are still on Microprocessor 8085/8086, but who can tell the authorities anything? Here comes the answer: only Digit can since it pays attention to new and old architecture. The magazine is not only for fun lovers and professionals but for students who find it informative as well.

The love and affection with which you share with us has created a strong bond between Digit and me. I strongly believe that this emotional connection that Digit has maintained with all of us will never break. Here's hoping that the year ahead is full of hope and creativity.

Priyesh Batra

📧 Thank you for your kind words Priyesh. It's letters like yours that make it all worthwhile in the end. :)

✉ I wanted to know that whether there's any relation between Digit Magazine and Chip Magazine. Somebody told me that they belong to the same company. Is it true? Please tell me.
