NOTE: Before we begin, please remember to read this in a husky, Godfather-esque voice with the Godfather theme playing in the background.

“My sons, come closer.” His sons glanced at each other and took a step forward, the worry apparent in their faces. “I’m growing old and feeble and will not be around to guide this family for long. You must learn, you must understand the lay of the land if this family is to survive. The digital world is a dangerous place and we have been away too long, far too long.” He burst into a paroxysm of coughing; long, hacking coughs that seemed intent on turning Him inside out.
