

Community

The Digit squad members are at it again. Read the two articles 1- "Must have apps for android" and 2- "Rooting Android devices"

Nokia vs HTC

Nokia wins in a patent lawsuit filed against HTC for a way to remove errors from radio signals <http://digit.in/14BargE>

Zombies: Saviours of the Human Race

Hey, don't look so incredulous. Of course zombies can save the human race. Think about it, one of the primary "powers" of a zombie is that it completely ignores the laws of thermodynamics. They're a source of almost unlimited power come hell or high water!

Power generation

Electricity, it's the one thing that we geeks can't live without and we're pretty sure that one of the first things a zombie apocalypse would uproot will be the infrastructure for power generation. What do we do? We round up dozens of zombies, hitch them up to a turbine and have them chase some live creature for weeks on end. They'll never tire.

Farming

The zombie apocalypse has arrived and the supermarkets are running out of food. You're a geek who somehow survived (paranoia saves lives) and you wouldn't know the first thing about harnessing a cow. But wait! Zombies! You're a walking encyclopedia on those. Hack of the hands, smash the teeth and you've got the perfect beast for your farm.

Transport

You're not really thinking about exercising those leg muscles when you travel are you? Just devise a Flintstones' style bus, put the zombies in the back and dangle a proverbial carrot (someone's arm or leg, there'll be plenty lying around) and get those unGodly creatures to start walking. You can now start a fully-functional transportation empire!

Bowling

Bowling against those standard 9-pins is so dull. One of the reasons you never did it much – apart from the fact that you couldn't life the ball – was that there wasn't enough blood and guts to appeal to you. Now, just bury nine zombies in the mud and bowl away! Put 'em in upside down if you want some more mayhem, or maybe make them last longer.

Stress-relief

That super-frustrating ARMA session's have got your blood boiling (those frickin' n00bs! rghrfrckrkwrtshh!). Instead of smashing that precious keyboard, pick up your bat and go bash in some zombie skulls. They won't mind. Aaah! There's nothing like the smell of decaying flesh in the morning! Bash, bash bash! PTSD? What's that?

Crash test dummies

Vehicular safety has always been a problem. Engineers do their best, but theories and plastic dummies can only do so much. Why not go the whole hog and throw in a zombie? They're almost human and you won't find one complaining about a missing limb or three. Once damaged, discard. They're millions more where they came from.