

Nokia Lumia 1020 out this October

Featuring a 41-Megapixel 1/2" camera and a Snapdragon S4 Pro processor, this beast of a device is all set to enter the Indian market this October <http://digit.in/16u9Nir>

BlackBerry in talks to sell

The Canadian phone company is currently in talks with investors over a $4.7billion deal to sell itself to Fairfax <http://digit.in/1b0kNZa>

Unwind

How we unwind

Awesomenauts

This game turns the standard MOBA format into a side scroller, with ridiculously funny characters. The weeklong free to play offer on Steam pushed us into purchasing a four pack and much loss of productivity. Regidi and the Ant were comparative late comers to the game. Though they caught on fast enough

Humble Bundle

It's raining games here at Digit. Bundle after droolworthy bundle is coming out and despite the ridiculously low asking price, they're enough to put a strain on our ridiculously low bank balances. What can we do? They're irresistible. Some of us have already doubled our Steam libraries.

Newsroom

The third season of Newsroom arrived and finished. A series that has been on our radar for quite a while. Unfortunately, Newsroom has turned into pompous, preachy drivel. But it still has Olivia Munn and Emily Mortimer. And if it gets too boring we just imagine Jeff Daniels in his Dumb & Dumber avatar.

digit DIARY

To say that we were short-handed this month would be an understatement. Everyone was literally run-off their feet from the very start. Regidi charged off to his hometown to put his flimsy muscles to work (his parents were shifting house) and was gone for a couple of weeks, gleefully leaving all the SKOAR! and DVD work on the heads of the Ant and Big Daddy.

The Big Daddy is an old hand at this and handled the additional workload with aplomb, the Ant also, surprisingly, managed to hold his own and pull through with only one fainting spell in-between. On a side note, he's on track to receive the "Longest running internship" award (over nine months). He'll also be the most decorated intern we've ever had, having previously received the "Intern of the year" award as well.

While all this was going almost every tech company in India decided to hold its press conference this month. Not one day passed without a sweet-talking PR rep trying to persuade our hardy, weather-beaten staff to come and attend some sort of press event or other. At last count we received upwards of 40 invites and everyone from our features editor to our product manager was hauled off to some event or other.

If that wasn't bad enough, Jayesh bided his time, waited for Regidi's return and charged off to the US to attend yet another "press event", or so he claims; and this just at issue closing time. He's a smart one though (did we mention that he's an old hand?) and had his escape plan completely cut and dried before he informed us. He managed to wrangle a copy of GTA V out of the distributor's hands and is bequeathing us his PS3 for the duration of his trip. We're not completely mollified, but, well, it is GTA V after all. We've had to keep the PS3 under lock and key till the issue was done though. Our already meagre resources and exceedingly precious waking hours would have been fruitlessly wasted – in the management's eyes – on the completion of GTA V.

Speaking of gaming, the article on levelling up in Steam (refer to the SKOAR! Interactive edition) got Sid's blood pumping. Mithun and Sid are both caught in levelling up frenzy that seems more important to them than the games they actually play. Mithun is in the lead though, far ahead. Over 5 years as a member and the hundreds of hours sunk into TF2 have their advantages.

All this is by-the-by though. We've saved the biggest tit-bit for last. Raaabo has successfully managed to clone himself! He is now the proud (very proud) father of a healthy baby boy. Our hearty congratulations to him and if you want to send him your wishes as well, do send them to editor@thinkdigit.com. We do wonder what he's got planned for the future of his Mini-Me though. We're sure it'll be something awesome.