

Survive without water

This incredible guide will show you how to get by when stuck in the wilderness without water: <http://dgit.in/15QBPrR>

Landscapes made from food

Follow the link to gawk at fifteen surreal landscapes made from food. Great wall of china cake anyone? <http://dgit.in/foodpron>

Twitter Goes Big!

It was a pretty busy month for Twitter, the world's favourite microblogging site with the company buying two different start-ups that could help it expand its ad revenue stream and explore various avenues

Twitter buys MoPub – a mobile advertising start-up

Twitter has bought MoPub, a start-up focusing on mobile ad exchanges, in a deal estimated at $350 million. Twitter is planning to use MoPub's technology to venture deeper into mobile advertising.

Senior Director of Product for Twitter, Kevin Weil said that Twitter also plans to use MoPub's technology to build real-time bidding into the Twitter ads platform so that their advertisers can more easily automate and scale their buys.

"MoPub's technology lets mobile application publishers manage their inventory and optimise multiple sources of advertising direct ads, house ads, ad network, and real-time bidding through the MoPub Marketplace," said Weil in a blog post.

Two major trends in the ad world right now are the rapid consumer shift toward mobile usage, and the industry shift to programmatic buying. According to him, Twitter sits at the intersection of these, and by bringing MoPub's technology and team to Twitter, they can further drive these trends for the benefit of consumers, advertisers and agencies. Twitter said that it plans to keep MoPub's mobile ad exchange running.

According to MoPub CEO Jim Payne, there will be no major changes post acquisition. In a blog statement, he said, "It's important to underscore that our commitment to you, the publisher, will not change. In fact, it will be strengthened. Twitter will invest in our core business and we'll continue to build the tools and technology you need to better run your mobile advertising business."

Industry tracker eMarketer expects Twitter to earn $582.8 million globally in ad revenue this year and nearly $1 billion by next year. Twitter is already doing well in the mobile ads space and the MoPub acquisition will further strengthen the company.

Twitter acquires social data analytics company, Trendrr

Twitter has acquired social analytics company Trendrr to enhance its offerings in the entertainment industry. As a result of the acquisition, Trendrr will continue with its existing contacts but won't be accepting any more new business.

Twitter who's been recently seen moving into the TV, music, and entertainment industry is aiming to push its services to broadcast media companies as a way of amplifying audiences and increasing engagement. Trendrr will help Twitter to accomplish this by bringing in its analytic services and staff to the microblogging company. Trendrr also holds a US patent for technology involving a system and method for collecting and processing data through a communications network, awarded in September 2012. The financial details about the deal have not been disclosed.

Trendrr

Twitter confirmed the acquisition with a tweet, "Excited to welcome @Trendrr to the Flock! Will help us to build great tools for the rest of the TV ecosystem."

Trendrr's founder Mark Ghunheim commented on the acquisition, "Over the last five years we have led the way in working with real-time data and television, unlocking the power and value of engagement around TV and creating compelling media experiences around content. That's why we are excited to be joining Twitter's world class team, enabling us to realize bigger opportunities that drive better experiences for users, media and marketers – across Twitter and around the globe."

Twitter had recently tied up with MTV owner Viacom, to increase viewership and the conversation around live content as well as to include ad embeds into live streams to increase monetisation. Twitter has also partnered with microblogging platform Nielsen to create a Twitter TV Rating which tracks ratings using social media data.

Groupon India's discount sale on onions crashes website

Onions are an essential ingredient in every Indian household and its rising prices are having a major impact on the common

ONLY Rs.9 to Grab a Kilo of Onions!

Buy Now!

Amount: from Rs.9.00

Discount 0 % You save Rs.0.00

Time left to buy
00 Days 00 : 28 : 57

14507 Bought!
Sold Out!

Recommend to friend!
Facebook | Twitter

Highlights

CASH ON DELIVERY NOT AVAILABLE

- Pay a ridiculous Rs 9 for a KILO of onions
- No, we aren't kidding!
- Let us unleash your culinary skills with a recipe for Onion Palaoa

Fine Print

- Referral credits are not applicable for this deal
- Only 1kg per delivery address will be allowed
- Fresh stock will be procured everyday and quality standards will be adhered to. However, given the nature of product, no replacement requests will be processed.
- Only 3,000kg of onions will be put for sale everyday for 7 consecutive days starting at 10PM each day
- Delivery Timeline:
- Expect the product to reach you within 10 days of order