

74 Logitech Driving Force GT

Racing simulator games just don't feel the same on a controller, you have to enjoy them on a driving wheel. And the Logitech Driving Force GT's a no-nonsense racing wheel with quite good performance. It isn't as expensive as the G27 (from Logitech) or as precise as the Steelseries SRW-S1, but strikes a good balance between price, performance, and features.

75 Xbox One

Do we really have to do this again? Console gamers who aren't on the PS3, do yourself a favour and get hold of the Xbox One. We don't know the fate of RROD, but the One's brimming with features that deprived X360 fans have been waiting for. With improved hardware, a new controller, and a super-enhanced Kinect and Xbox LIVE, not to mention a whole slew of tantalizing gaming titles, it's time to take your gaming experience to the next level. Preorders starts next month.

76 HTC One

Finally a phone from HTC that stands up to scrutiny for being one of the very best Android phones to launch this year – and not being overshadowed by the likes of Samsung. The HTC One is universally hailed for its build quality, a phone that exudes class and polish and manages to impress the hell out of us with its performance and features.

77 LG 29EA93

Ultrawide HD monitors are the next wave and the LG 29EA93P is one fine specimen worth buying. We tested it earlier this year and were quite impressed with its performance, innovative design, in-depth OSD features and it's huge canvas. It's literally like two HD monitors were fused together into one, a brilliant idea. If you're looking to buy a new monitor, we highly recommend this one.

78 Galaxy GTX 770

With two fans on this card against the single one seen on the stock GTX 770 from NVIDIA, the GTX 770 from Galaxy runs a tad cooler. Its build quality is decent as they've used a nicely designed metal shroud on top. In terms of performance, this card would run all the current crop of games with ease, don't you worry. It's definitely better than the stock GTX 770 and a great option to go for your high end gaming needs.

79 Audioengine A5+

If the A2 was awesome, the A5+ is even more awesome for anyone looking for a good pair of audiophile speakers. How good are they? They're superb, they're loud and for someone who's rarely ever heard really great speakers, these are the best things that you can ever buy. These speakers are not for the meek. They're for a deep-pocketed music lover who can afford to indulge in a hassle-free setup.

80 Google Chromecast

This is one tiny device you must get your hands on. It's a pen drive-sized USB dongle measuring less than three inches that plugs into any HDTV, and voila! It lets you play audio/video content off the Web or a local network. This diminutive media streaming adapter has mobile apps on Android and iOS, as well as Google Chrome, letting you wirelessly interact with the plugged in Chromecast and mirror content off devices. Only for $35, isn't that a steal?
