

Buzz

We cover the ups and downs in the tech universe. This month was full of funny moments.

Software Hipster

Learn to live without Java, Adobe Flash and Acrobat Reader in today's day and age. Read more at: <http://dgit.in/backtothestoneage>

✉ A very happy Diwali to Team Digit. I've been reading Digit for more than four years now but this is the first time I am writing to you. First of all, I would like to thank you for the wonderful articles you provide in all your magazines and also for the speedy delivery. Since the past six months I've been getting my issues on the first day of the month itself!

I am happy that Siddharth has taken over the editorial. From my point of view I can tell you that we Siddharths are actually very impressive :-)

I love Digit for everything from the latest updates in the tech world to product reviews, and from the excellent articles to all the useful links that you give throughout the magazine. But most of all, I like the Tips and Tricks section. On the second-last page of the issue (in the RSS Feed), Robert Sir has talked about the change to the brand Digit and Siddharth taking charge over the editorial pages. First of all, congratulations sir on becoming father to Lucas Isaac. I have deep respect for every line you wrote and the paragraph in which you mentioned that it's time to give a chance to the fresh blood was the best. And yes, let me tell you sir, you and your team have already done a lot for us and changes with the magazine in the recent past have been simply amazing, specifically:

1. DGT with all the latest products in the tech world – it's simply EPIC!
2. Encyclopedia Technica (my personal favourite) – best for beginners in the tech world.
3. And best of all – SKOAR! in digital format – a boon for fellow gamers, though I am not much of a gamer myself, if you want to survive in the tech world you need to be updated from time to time about everything related to it.

And I am sure #StaticSid will take the Digit brand to new levels. At last I would like to say hats off to the brilliance of your team from all the fellow Digitians. Without a doubt I can say that Digit is the best and most read tech magazine in our country and soon it will be all over the world (I mean it). As my contribution to Digit, I'll try to make people aware of our brand (which I usually do). Very excited about the special and last issue of the year. Looking forward to meet you someday.

Feedback for the November 2013 issue of Digit

-Siddharth Santwani

✉ A very happy Diwali to you and your family Siddharth, and thank you for those wonderful words. You really made our week! :) I'm sure you'll enjoy this issue. We've got all of your favourites including Encyclopedia Technica. And if you want to drop in the next time you are in Mumbai, feel free to give us a call and come by.

- Robert

✉ This is the very first time I am writing to you. (I know most people start with this line but please don't mind me). Firstly, I want to tell you about my deep relationship with Digit. I am currently 15 years old. I got into computers at the age of five or six. I used to do very basic functions (I am not praising myself) like those good old games and some printing work (I had remembered the shortcut keys).

One day, I was looking for something at my relative's home and I found this great magazine called Digit. The cover was so attractive that I continued just looking at the cover for about 5 minutes. Reading the book was not in my reach because I was too young. But a second look and I found the DVDs. It had some great content and good games. I got addicted. From that day, whenever Digit came to my relative's home, I always used to ask for it and continued finding good stuff in it.

Last year in December, when I became capable of reading the Digit magazine, I subscribed for it. The first ever issue I got was in fact ironically the "Last Ever Issue"! What an issue that was. Few issues like the Feb and April one did disappoint me. But my overall experience has been great. The product reviews, Tips and Tricks, World View etc. are all great. Fast Track is the best addition to Digit. Since I am a developer, I look forward to a Fast Track on Visual Basic 2013 if you can provide it. It releases on 13th November.

Now, my subscription is expiring in November and I am not subscribing anymore because of my studies. I will subscribe again in April when my exams will have been over.

Few things:

- In November issue, why didn't you feature the new iPads? You should have started the printing work later because that was an important event. Now when will you cover that? By the next issue, the news would have become old.
- Sometimes you cover a lot about cameras in a single issue. Please