

Gaga goes high

Lady Gaga takes her act to a whole new level. It seems like she really wants to be out of this world <http://dgit.in/planetgaga>

Software hipster

Learn to live without Java, Adobe Flash and Acrobat Reader in today's day and age. Read more on: <http://dgit.in/backtothestoneage>

3% of employees of HCL's 15,000-strong full-time employees are part of the manufacturing vertical."

According to a TOI report, the PC business contributes about 8%, which is around ₹1,000 crore, to the company's overall revenues. With growing popularity of smartphones, tablets and phablets, HCL's PC business had been under an immense pressure. The Rupee's value against the Dollar and other currencies has also hit the Indian PC market, considering the fact that about 90-95% of the components are imported.

Research firm IDC's report for Q1'13 showed a record dip in placed on either side of frame gathering solar energy while you're out in the sun. Once the sun goes out, this energy can then be harnessed to charge your smartphone.

The sunglasses have been designed by US-based Indian designer Sayalee Kaluskar as a part of a student project at Miami Ad School in San Francisco. Kaluskar collaborated with Ramiro Ramirez on the project as part of their student work.

The sunglasses have detachable arms that can be attached to your phone via a microUSB charging port or Lightning connectors that allow them to

"We will be stopping manufacturing. My distribution today does lot of distribution of PCs of multiple brands... We will be in PC distribution and in after-sales services but will not manufacture HCL branded products some time in the future. Manufacturing is not something that is keeping me awake, it's not part of HCL story now."

—Harsh Chitale,
HCL Infosystems CEO & MD

PC shipments worldwide. PC makers shipped 76.3 million units in the first three months of 2013, which is a 13.9% decline over the same period in 2012.

Solar Ray-Bans

Indian designer Sayalee Kaluskar has introduced the Ray-Ban Shama Shades. They come with two solar panels transfer power to your device. Although Kaluskar stated that even an entire day spent in the sun won't be sufficient to charge your smartphone completely, it will be enough to keep it running for a while.

Recently, the technology for harnessing solar energy for wearable gear has been in the news. Apple has sent an application for a patent on a system to outfit mobile devices with solar power converters.

PS4 vs XBOX One standoff in December

Online retailer Snapdeal has both, the PS4 and Xbox One listed on its website. Both the consoles are surprisingly priced the same, with EMI options and pre-orders available. It seems that the Indian showdown for the next gen consoles has begun.

While Sony and Microsoft have both been tight-lipped about the exact launch dates of their next gen consoles in India, Snapdeal seems pretty confident about the launch being in December. Sony mentioned that the PS4 might launch in India late in 2013, but it removed that listing from its website indicating that the launch might be delayed. Microsoft, however, clearly stated that the Xbox One will release in India later next year.

No other online retailers have started taking pre-orders except Game4u that started doing it back in July. Snapdeal has both the consoles priced at ₹40,000 which seems strange as the Xbox One is priced higher than the PS4 in the US and European markets. Theoretically, the PS4 should cost around ₹25,137 and the Xbox One should be around ₹31,437, going by the current exchange rate.

Microsoft sends out doctor's note to Xbox Live subscribers, hilarity ensues

Looking for an excuse to get out of work? Need to ditch college? Microsoft to the rescue!

The Xbox One launched on 22nd November, and many of us in other nations won't be graced by the console's presence till late 2014. That didn't stop Microsoft from sending out a little goody in the form of a mailer.

Xbox Live subscribers across the globe received a mail from Microsoft in the form of a medical certificate addressing bosses all over the world that deems the recipient unfit for any kind of duties. The note stated:

"Due to the Zombie Flu your employee will not be able to fulfill the scheduled commitment he/she has with you. Because of the severity of this condition I'm prescribing a heavy dose of Xbox One. He needs to destroy zombies."

If you like a good laugh, or a ridiculous excuse to get out of humanly duties, then feel free to issue this medical note as you go off decapitating the undead. Warning: Holding a machete in your hand while handing the note might be recommended.

Get the note from our website at: <http://dgit.in/Zombiexcuse>

