

PSN Goes Retro

PS4 organizes a scavenger hunt. The prize: Three PSOne Games retrofitted for the new console. Check it out: <http://dgit.in/retrops>

Space Hulk Reviewed

Space Hulk, a video game set in the Warhammer 40,000 universe, is reviewed: <http://dgit.in/spacehulk>

Drool maal

iRobot Roomba 880

Hailed by many as the best cleaning robot in our fight against dirt, this is the ultimate gift for bachelors surrounded by a mountain of dirt away from home or gadget-savvy households eager to show-off their new "housemaid" to visiting family friends and relatives. Worldwide, the iRobot Roomba has become the go-to name in robotic vacuum cleaners. It looks like a circular weighing scale that's self-propelled and works without a hitch on carpet, tile, hardwood or laminate. It sucks up dirt, vacuums along wall edges, stores all that muck in a HEPA-filtered bin, doesn't fall off stairs, is controllable via a remote, and intelligently returns to its docking station when low on battery. And this is just the tip of the iceberg. At $700 (₹44,000), it's not the cheapest house cleaning attendant you'll hire, but boy is it cooler!

Google Chromecast

This is an interesting little device that that should be high on your gadget gifts list as it effectively connects your smartphone, tablet, laptop or desktop PC to an HDMI-enabled HDTV – without connecting wires, too. The Chromecast seamlessly lets you beam content from your handheld smart device onto your big-screen TV – watch YouTube videos, Netflix, Hulu, Pandora, and Google Music and Google TV and Movies. When you're doing this, your phone or tablet becomes the TV remote. Its beta screen-mirroring feature – which lets you beam your Chrome browser session to a large screen – is still restrictive, but it's only a matter of time before Google keeps adding more apps to the Chromecast party. This is a steal at $35 (₹2,200).

Iogear Mediashair Hub

This device is perfect for anyone who needs a small, matchbox-sized wireless hub that supports a variety of media devices – because that's what the Iogear Mediashair Hub is. It can plug into any wired network with an RJ45 jack, it acts as a compact wireless router that can simultaneously connect up to seven gadgets (laptops, Android, iOS smartphones, tablets, etc) within its range. What's more, with an SD Card reader and USB port, it can stream photos from a camera's card or movies from a plugged in hard drive. That's not it, the device also functions as a portable battery pack, with a 2600 mAh battery. At $100 (₹6,000) they're perfect for road trips.

