

Drones FTW!

See how drones are being used for mapping areas and protecting endangered species: <http://dgit.in/DronesFTW>

Moggles

This portable Virtual Reality headset made for smartphones also comes with a game controller <http://dgit.in/MogglesVR>

Drool maal

Snap

This isn't just a multifunctional light bulb, but a true jack of many trades. The 'Snap' from Sengled packs in a microphone and speaker to monitor and secure your home's perimeter. It also has a built-in webcam and motion sensor. Powered by a 25,000-hours lasting LED lamp, the $170 (₹10,591) Snap is capable of recording HD 720p 30fps videos.

It can also act as a Wi-Fi repeater to extend your home wireless network's signal. Needless to say, it can take snaps and record footage of people at the door, recognising familiar faces through in-built face detection software. Pretty neat, huh?

Phaz Music P2

Apart from being a trendy, stylish-looking headphone, the 'P2' from Phaz Music is loaded with an in-built power bank, just in case your smartphone or tablet's battery starts to bail on your music listening sessions. The headphone's 1,200 mAh battery delivers power to a compatible device through a micro-USB cable. Apart from 40mm neodymium magnet drivers and 15dB bass boost, the P2s also come with a 3.5mm audio out port to daisy chain another headphone – making sharing what you're listening to with a friend that much more convenient. The headphones are available for pre-order right now for $249 (₹16,133).

Dart

It calls itself the world's smallest laptop charger that's actually functional for use, and we don't doubt that claim. Built and designed by FINSix, an MIT startup, the 'Dart' houses patented technology that makes it up to four times smaller and six times lighter than a conventional 65W laptop charger. It's literally as small as a smartphone charger. What's even more drool worthy is the fact that Dart can charge not only a laptop but also smartphones and tablets, thereby making it truly one charger to rule them all. Perfect for mobile nirvana! It's available for preorder now for $89 (₹5,543) and expected to ship within a couple of months.

