Latitude 12 Rugged Tablet

The tablet to use behind enemy lines

If you're planning your next trekking or mountain climbing expedition, Dell has a new gadget that you can take along. Pitched as an extreme tablet, the Latitude 12 Rugged Tablet will be capable of handling spills, dust, and temperatures between the extreme range of roughly -28 and 62 degrees, Celsius. The tablet already sounds like it is all set to hit the war front and should find its application in military, industries, emergency and rescue operations, and – as expected – adventure!

The specs of this mean little machine doesn't fall short anywhere, running on an 5th Gen Intel Core processor giving 12 hours of battery life and up to 512 GB of Solid State Drive storage options. The 11.6-inch screen can be used with working gloves. It can withstand falls from more than four feet and even boasts of having 'quad-cooling' thermal management.

The price of the Latitude 12 Rugged Tablet isn't available now but we expect it to be really heavy on our wallets.

Enter: GT350

As the much-awaited Ford Shelby GT350 makes its way into the market in the coming months, the car's specifications make their way into the news, one little detail at a time. Here's a new one: <http://digit.in/1Ko49Uu>

Legal, butt nosey

Listening in on butt dials (also called 'pocket dials' for the sake of political correctness) have officially received a precedent in the court of law – and it's allowed! Be careful when you accidentally call friends. Suing them is a lot harder, now. <http://digit.in/legalbuttnosey>

Rise of Croft

The new Tomb Raider game seems to be an origin story for Croft. Rise of the Tomb Raider is scheduled to launch on November 10th on Playstation 4 and PC, alike. Fams await with bated breath and empty their schedules for the occasion. <http://digit.in/RotCroft>

Twin story

Earth's distant cousin surfaces in the distant constellation of Cygnus. The Kepler-452b has longer years and a sun that's been around a million years or so longer than ours. Pack your bags, people! It's almost time to get out of here! <http://digit.in/keplar452>
