Hello folks,

Happy new year. Wasn't expecting main magazine to be printed in such haphazard manner. Felt like you guys were running out of time and printing had to be done in super quickie way

Most surprising part in this month's magazine was the real estate poster, i mean I am looking for a house, wasn't expecting promotion from digit magazine.

Sad to see that you had pages to print ads but no pages for your zero1 awards. There were ads between every article. Usually the ads were at the end of every article, but this was like YouTube ads going print mode.

Regardless of all this, i still love the magazine and other hardcopy items that you send. Not a fan of ebooks and other digital stuff. I hope digit magazine never dies like PCWorld or Chip. Your digital content is ok but not as good as Engadget or Verge.

I really miss some of your old contents like "20 graphics card compared", instead they have been replaced with science. Nevermind Only change is constant, i have to deal with it. You guys do mention that you are pc lovers, yet i hardly saw any page covering details of new am5 or Intel processor in the magazine. Most of the sections are related mobile and its associated hardware.

Would be great to see if you cover topics like side effects of losing data privacy, as people in today's age are least concerned about losing data to third party. I shifted from whatsapp to signal, yet i am the only who gets mocked for standing against privacy policy.

If you are planning to do cost cutting, you can get rid of posters, i mean they are great but not necessary. Also have you ever thought of using recycled papers, like for eg after reading my magazine i really don't know what to do with them(any suggestion would be grateful). I cant archive them as parents won't allow. However as part of go green initiative you can take back the magazine and recycle them for future printing at no cost no discount.

Regards,

Hey Vineet,

The Zero1 Awards is a massive undertaking that reels in multiple departments with way more people involved in the entire IP than most of the other special initiatives that we bring out. Planning the Zero1 Awards is thus, a massively complicated task. And that also leaves a lot of scope for things to slip between the cracks. The Zero1 Awards took up more pages in the magazine than anything else and it's no longer just the magazine pages that reveal the Zero1 Award Winners of the year. We've got a physical event, lots of social media content building up to the event and even after the event. And there's a dedicated microsite for the Zero1 Awards. So it's a pretty massive affair. And every year, we're pushing to make it even better. So if you feel that we're falling short, then we'll make up for it next year. And make it even better, the year after that.

As for the advertisements, December is the only month with the highest number of ads. Every other month, including this one, has far fewer ads. So you might come across the occasional realty ad or two, but that's what they will be – occasional realty ads.

The PC stuff is going up! We've got a dedicated SKOAR! Supplement starting this month and it's going to cover all sorts of gaming. PC, console and even mobile gaming. Also, we're gunning to bring back massive comparisons that were the norm a couple of years ago. You'll see them soon.
