

Mr C Sukumaran
Senior Director - Consumer System
Products & Imaging Communication
Business, Canon India

Mr C Sukumaran (Canon India) talks to us about the digital camera market in India and Canon's latest launch, the EOS R6 Mk II

We talk to Mr C Sukumaran of Canon India about the changing camera market in India and Canon's place in it

Ali Akbar Merchant | ali@digit.in

In the wake of the launch of a new camera from the stables of Canon, we had a little talk With Mr C Sukumaran (Senior Director - Consumer System Products & Imaging Communication Business, Canon India) about their new camera the Canon R6 Mk II and a few other questions regarding the new innovations and trends in the digital camera industry. Edited excerpts from our interview below:

Old point-and-shoot segment of cameras have nearly gone extinct, being taken over by smartphones and the rapid improvements that are part of the smartphone camera systems. Is Canon planning to make their cameras more user-friendly, like maybe even adding an Android-like interface?

A The subject of point-and-shoot has been hanging around for quite a while now. Having said that, let me give you a bit of background on that. Smartphones have impacted camera sales and it all started almost a decade ago. And then over a period, there was significant technological improvement in our own cameras. At Canon, we still have entry level cameras. But what's happened now is that the consumers who are using smartphones have started to upgrade, especially if you look at one