

Madhav Sheth

CEO, of Realme India and
President, of Realme
International Business
Group

Madhav Sheth on Realme 10 series and company's India plans for 2023

"The focused approach is key to our second stage of growth and will enable us to provide best-in-class technology..."
—Madhav Sheth

Sushant Talwar | sushant@digit.in

Realme added another feather to its cap recently with the launch of its latest number of devices, the Realme 10 series. The new devices add to the existing line-up of products from the company and help it take important steps forward with its refreshed design language and powerful hardware. We recently sat down with Madhav Sheth, CEO, of Realme India and President, of Realme International Business Group, to understand what these devices mean for the company, and also what Realme has in store for Indian consumers in 2023.

Q What does the new 10 series stand for Realme? What is the vision behind the phones?

A Realme 10 Pro series is a part of our popular number series that reflects our vision of making technology accessible to all and providing a leap-forward experience to users. We started the Realme number series to challenge the status quo and till today continue to follow this motto by making important technological features available to all and not just a fraction of the population. This time, we have attempted to make a curved display available to our users for a rich experience alongside some strong privacy features. Being a new generation of products, and the tenth generation of our Realme Number Series, Realme 10 Pro series is truly special to us and is a perfect combination of technology and design. There is no doubt that it will emerge as a true superstar in the Realme Number Series line-up.

Q Tell us about what makes the Realme 10 series phones special? And what are the key highlights and features of the phones?

A Continuing with our commitment to empowering the youth through