WhatsApp Status features that would enhance your messaging experience

Status is a WhatsApp feature that lets you share photos, videos, GIFs, text, and more with your contacts for a 24-hour window. After 24 hours, WhatsApp Statuses expire and disappear. A new WhatsApp update brings more features to this. WhatsApp users had been looking forward to these features and now that they are here, let's see how things change for the users of the Meta-owned messenger.

1. Private Audience Selector

WhatsApp Status features You can now choose who gets to view updates for individual WhatsApp Statuses. This makes sure that you get total control of the viewership of your status updates, limiting it to a more controlled audience. Previously, Facebook and Instagram have had this feature added to their stories feature.

2. Voice Status

You can record and share voice messages for up to 30 seconds on WhatsApp status. This should give you more time to express yourself on WhatsApp Statuses using your voice. Voice notes are already one of the most popular ways for people to share information with each other. Now, with the introduction of this new voice status update feature, it will be interesting to see how things change on the app.

3. Status Reactions

You can now react to WhatsApp Statuses with emoji reactions. You get eight emoji options to choose from. This is again one of the features that has been implemented in the stories feature of apps like Instagram and Facebook that are owned by Meta, which also controls WhatsApp messenger.

4. Status Profile Rings For New Updates

You will see status rings around contact profile pictures in chat lists, group participant lists, and contact info. Once a software level feature provided by phone manufacturers, this feature was one of the most anticipated of all when it came to WhatsApp updates. Given the fact that most of these features initially had been controlled by manufacturers, there was a portion of WhatsApp users that were left without access to it."

WhatsApp has been experimenting by adding new features to its app. Some time ago, we had seen the addition of Avatars. They let users create an animated version of their own self. This was aimed at letting the users of the platform better express themselves, moving away from the boudations of plain text and emojis. If the initial reports are anything to by, then the users are welcoming these new features with open arms.
