iPhone 15 colour variants leaked

Apple has always been ahead of all phones when it comes to the colour variants of its iPhone.

Apple now has decided to make its Pro iPhones stand apart from its standard iPhones. But a Weibo user under the name Setsuna Digital claims that the iPhone 15 and 15 Plus will have a back panel with a frosted glass, giving it a matte look which only the iPhone 14 Pro features. So, as per Apple's plan this rumour can turn out to be true as they have a new look for the iPhone 15 models in mind. That's not all, the same Weibo user has also claimed in another post that Apple would bring a Cyan colour to its iPhone 15 range. Earlier there were rumours of the iPhone 15 series coming in colour variants like light blue and pink for the standard model and a dark red for the pro model. There is a reason why this Weibo user's tip should be taken into consideration. The same user has predicted the yellow colour variants for iPhone 14 earlier this year and it actually was launched. Apple generally comes up with five colour variants for the standard model and four for Pro. Midnight (Black) and Starlight (White) are obvious two variants including the Red one for Pro. So, for other variants we can take the light blue, pink and cyan into consideration. <https://dgit.in/iPhone15Colours>

Apple completes 25 years in India

As a brand, Apple has cemented itself as a mainstay in the world of smartphones, laptops, and now wearables and accessories. The brand's love affair with India, predates its existence. It started when its co-founder, Steve Jobs, fell in love with the country and started visiting India before even establishing the brand. This week marks the completion of 25 years of the brand in India, as it gears up for the inauguration of its first official Apple stores in India. In case you didn't know, Apple is set to open two stores in India. The first is in Mumbai and is opening on April 18, and the second is in Delhi set to open on April 20. This comes on the back of the rising affinity of the Indian populous towards the brand. That mainly comes from iPhones and MacBooks having a sense of ownership-pride attached to them. Apple's CEO, Tim Cook, commented on the completion of this milestone and said, "At Apple, our mission is to enrich lives and empower people around the world." He added, "India has such a beautiful culture and an incredible energy, and we're excited to build on our long-standing history — supporting our customers, investing in local communities, and working together to build a better future with innovations that serve humanity."
