

When Lunch and Games Dominate the Day

It was just another day at the office when Dhriti, Manish, Mithun, Satvik, and Ali gathered in the break room for lunch. Satvik and Manish had taken over the cooking duties, preparing a sumptuous Butter Chicken dish. The aroma of spices and curry wafted through the air, causing everyone's stomachs to grumble with anticipation.

The team had just finished their meal when Soham from the Delhi office joined their Zoom call.

The Great Beta Hunt

Soham had been eagerly awaiting the release of Counter-Strike 2 for months. As an avid FPS gamer, he couldn't wait to get his hands on the beta version. That is, until Satvik overheard Soham's conversation. He immediately offered to join forces with Soham to find the beta version. The duo quickly became known as "The Ultimate Beta Hunters" in the office, and they scoured the internet for any hints of a release date or access to the beta. As the days went by, Soham and Satvik scoured the internet for any information on the beta release. "The Ultimate Beta Hunters" soon became the talk of the office.

Music to the Ears

Meanwhile, the Digit Test Centre in Mumbai was being inundated with speakers and headphones, and all sorts of music were playing in the office as people worked away. It was like a musical cacophony, with everyone trying to outdo each other with their playlists. But it didn't matter as long as they were able to work with some background music.

The AI Blues

The office was abuzz with excitement as the AI-written magazine was finally released. But as people began to read it, a sense of disappointment started to creep in. The articles lacked the human touch that the team had worked hard to incorporate in the past. The writers were replaced by algorithms, and it showed in the writing. The post-AI written magazine issue blues engulfed the office, and the team missed the days when they could feel the emotions behind the words. But, soon things got back on track, as everyone started working on the next issue. For the first time in months, we had more content than needed, as everyone jumped in to exercise their brains and churn out content that they love!

The Minecraft Debacle

Manish tried to organise a Minecraft PvP battle between Satvik, Mithun, and Dhriti. The plan was to have a fierce battle to the death in the virtual world of Minecraft. But chaos ensued as soon as Manish gave Mithun and Dhriti access to Creative mode. They started building elaborate structures and ignoring the battle altogether, leading to an absurd situation that left everyone in fits of laughter.

Endless Meetings

Jayesh, Soham, and Mithun sat through an excruciating 8-hour-long meeting, and by the end of it, their eyes were glazed over and their minds numb. They desperately needed a break from the monotony of the day.

The Intern Enrichment Program

But the highlight of the month was the arrival of two interns, Ichha and Druti, who were put through the "Digit Intern Enrichment Program." It was like watching two newborn puppies trying to navigate a room full of adults. Their enthusiasm was infectious, and their eagerness to learn was endearing. The program was designed to give the

Manish Rajesh

Why am I being photographed?

