

DEAD ISLAND 2

Should Be Fun But It Really Isn't

By Andrew "Edgecrusher" Lu | feedback@skoar.in

I really wanted to have fun in Dead Island 2 but a ton of issues kept me from truly enjoying myself. Full disclosure, I never played the first game but I do know people who've spent at least 50 hours in the game so there must be something there, right? Armed with that knowledge, I jumped into the world of HELL-A to see if smashing, crushing and brutalizing zombie skulls was as fun as the trailers looked. I mean, we all watched that trailer, right? The one that generated all kinds of hype around the game? Well, be prepared to be disappointed once again as Dead Island 2 is pretty much a dud. Nothing about the game really stands out as a AAA experience. Read on to find out why the game just does not make the cut.

Graphics And Gameplay

The game looks pretty good. There is no doubt that in terms of pure graphical fidelity, Dead Island 2 looks damn good. LA is suitably sunny and really gives off that Hollywood vibe with the right amount of snootiness. Character models also look great with the gore turned up to 11!

Every time you hit a zombie, you unleash a barrage of viscera that will have you squirming in delight. All the weapons look good with special mention to the rusty cleaver. It's gritty, deadly and looks great on screen. As far as main character models go, I was a little disappointed the developers went with the whole Zoomer cringe-core design. The characters look so out of place and I didn't want to play using any of them. I finally settled on Jacob as I found his voice actor the least grating among the 5 protagonists. The one issue with overdesigning these characters is that you never really see them in the game. One of the few issues I noticed was that there are literally no reflections in the game. Maybe the developers used a shadow map or something but real-time reflections are not present in the game.

Another issue with the game is the lack of enemy variety. How many times can you fight the same enemies, over and over and over again? By the time I hit the 5 to 6-hour map, I was already exhausted from fighting the same 3 to 4 zombie
