

The Game of Life Goals

If Second Life was a card-based game

If you are someone who is bored of building your empire in the world of pixels (games like GTA V), then The Game of Life Goals is perfect for you! The premise is simple... You play cards to build a life story. That's it! In the game, there are eight kinds of cards guiding your life in the game. The first set is Lifestyle cards, which tell you about your lifestyle, for example, if you are dealt a Lover of Luxury Card, you need to ensure that you strategise the cards that are best suited for that lifestyle.

Choice cards determine what you are doing in your life. Things like Building a Family and starting your career are determined by these cards. Then there are cards like Family, Career, House, Adventure, Event, and Life Goal Cards, which you need to strategically pick and get ahead of the players competing against you. I won't be going into details of the gameplay, but after, having played a couple of rounds with friends at the office and at home, the Game of Life Goals looks very promising and something that you can carry with you on your next picnic trip.

It is something that, in my opinion, could be something that young kids in your family, if they grasp, could also get some actual life lessons from! There is more to what meets the eye with this game. From the looks, it seems like a game that mostly young adults, who are trying to build a world of their dreams would want to get their hands on, but even younger kids and older adults could get a lesson or two by playing this game!

All in all, the game of life, as I mentioned earlier, this game for me is more than just a card game, even if Hasbro did not intend that to be the case with it!

Godrej Spacetek Pro Digital Lock

A game changer in its own right

With things going digital and tech penetrating our lives in an unprecedented way, smart locks are riding the wave and moving from being a niche into the mainstream. One of the brands that has decided to build on this is Godrej. With their Spacetek Pro, the brand aims to bring smart locks with unforeseen tech into Indian households, and by the looks of it, they are doing well. The Spacetek Pro lock comes with an adjustable spy code, a 360-degree fingerprint sensor, a privacy mode, and an emergency battery as well. If you are having a guest over, for example, if you are a homestay host, then you can set up guest pins as well, which they can use to unlock the doors to your humble abode. The brand has been known to make locks that are trusted by many. So, their integration with smart tech would make for a compelling buy for anyone looking to digitise and add additional measures to their security systems.
