Sony WF-1000XM5 launched with key upgrades over the WF-1000XM4

Sony has silently released its new flagship TWS earbuds named the WF-1000XM5. The brand claims this new pair of buds have better sound quality, the best call quality, and the “Best Noise Cancelling”. Here is everything new it brings.

Starting with the design, the 1000XM5 is 20 percent lighter and 25 percent smaller than the precursor. Even the case is said to be 20% smaller. The buds sport IPX4 water resistance. In other words, it can withstand splashes and sweat while you are pumping iron in the gym. Moving to sound and noise handling aspects, you should know the 1000XM5 boasts industry-leading noise cancelling thanks to two proprietary processors (V2 and QN2e), 3 mics (two of which are for feedback), and noise-isolating ear tips. <https://bit.ly/47dvRnS>

Google plans to launch a foldable tablet by next year

After Asus and Lenovo, Google might join the league and offer a larger foldable device, according to reports. Google launched its first foldable device, Pixel Fold in the I/O 2023. Google I/O is the company's annual developer conference held in Mountain View, California. Now, the tech-giant seems to have bigger plans in the segment and might soon unveil bigger devices with the foldable feature.
