

Ringa ringa launches!

Samsung Galaxy Rings in the advanced stage: Will it take on Oura or be something more?

Samsung is reportedly working on an Oura ring alternative called the Galaxy Ring as per the South Korean news outlet The Elec. It is believed to be in the “advanced stage” which means it shouldn’t be long before we get to see the Samsung Galaxy Ring in the flesh. This isn’t the first time we are hearing about this device. Let’s take you through everything we know so far and see if it will be just a wearable device to track health and fitness or if it will be something more.

The thing with big companies like Samsung is that they have the resources and R&D capabilities to bring a new product or feature inspired by a pre-vailing small player. If successfully played out, this could put the third-party player in danger. In Apple land, this is called Sherlocking. Samsung also has come up with Galaxy SmartTag as a Tiles alternative. Now, it seems the South Korean tech titan is eyeing Oura and its smart rings. You wear an Oura ring on your finger like you do with a regular ring, and this thing tracks your sleep, heart rate, and other health stats. It is aimed to help the user improve sleep quality and overall health. Samsung must be working towards all of these things as it would want to capture a pie out of the $747.41 million market share. This is estimated to grow over 25% per year. <https://bit.ly/44NecIO>

Boat reveals Smart Ring wearable device

Boat has just confirmed a new product in the market which is called Smart Ring. You can get the idea from the name as it is actually a ring which can track your health and fitness just like smartwatches. Many people like to wear rings and not watches so in that case it can be a helpful device to track your health status. The smart ring is built with 5 ATM water and sweat resistance which means it’s good to wear daily or during any physical activity.

The Boat Smart Ring comes with ceramic and metal body and here are the features:

- The Smart Ring doesn’t seem inferior to smartwatches as it does everything a smartwatch can. It can track your steps, distance and calories burned on a daily basis. It also monitors your heart rate which can help you in ensuring heart health during physical activity.

- It also tracks the sleep cycle and menstrual cycle. Additionally, the smartring can also monitor body temperature and SpO2 level of the body.
- It features Smart Touch Controls that allows you to use the smartring single-handedly. The smartring syncs with the Boat Ring App and gives you all the analytics and information of your body. <https://bit.ly/47aNHrM>

Noise launches Luna smart ring in India

Noise Luna ring has launched in India. It has smart abilities like tracking your sleep health, heart rate and blood oxygen count. You can pre-order it for ₹2,000. Here are more details about the product including its specifications, key features, competition and availability.

The Luna Ring is a lightweight ring with an aluminium build and a diamond finish. It is only 3mm wide and has got 5ATM water resistance. The company claims it is skin friendly too. You can pick it up in 7 sizes and 5 colours. It connects with your smartphone via BLE 5.0. You can run it on phones with either iOS 14 and above or Android 6 and above. You just have to install the Noisefit app on the phone to control the ring’s settings and see the stats. Speaking of stats, using the Luna ring, you can keep track of 70+ health metrics, including heart rate, SpO2, sleep, body temperature, etc. It is rated to last for 7 days on a 60-minute charge.

If you’re thinking why a ring when there are plenty of smartwatches and fitness bands out there, it is because a ring is more personal and you are likely to wear it always up and close, unlike a watch or band. <https://bit.ly/3DyQCwH>