

If you're looking to start off your YouTube journey as a gaming streamer or if you'd like to help out a friend with their video edits, then this machine is built just for you. It features the latest Intel Core i5-13600KF which is a pretty great processor with a lot of cores and threads. And it's paired with the AMD Radeon RX 6750 which is also a great GPU for gaming especially when you switch on features such as FidelityFX Super Resolution. For the content creation aspect, this can be used for editing 4K videos easily but if you prefer to work on Adobe After Effects, then perhaps an NVIDIA GPU might help in certain aspects.

Graphics cards for you!

Wondering which GPU to get for your gaming system? This handy list should help. It ranges from the most expensive to the most reasonable graphics cards and comprises mostly the current-gen GPUs. It goes without saying that the ones at the bottom of the list excel at eSports titles whereas the stuff at the top is when you've got to have the best of the best. The newer RTX 40 series cards support DLSS 3.0 and are also better at churning out FPS with real-time ray-tracing switched on. And the same can be said for the new RX 7000 series graphics cards. The only concern is that you need to find yourself one in the market since they do run out of stock quite easily given how well they perform compared to competing cards. Lastly, if you're wondering which processor to pair these graphics cards with, then check out the list to the right.

Best VFM Gaming Processors

Are you wondering which processor gives you the best bang for buck? We've got you covered! And I don't mean like how CLAPTRAP has you covered on the world of Pandora. Nope, we do a better job! These processors have been chosen explicitly for providing the most number of frames in popular AAA video game titles. We've got CPUs starting from 20K going all the way to 58K. Just pick any.
