

We are not competing against any other brand as we feel our products are unique and stand apart –

Tivoli Audio's CEO, Paul DePasquale on the brand's entry into India

India has been a competitive market with massive returns for brands that have found their footing!

Satvik Pandey | satvik@digit.in

The Indian audio market is more competitive than ever! With established players making a rush to assert their dominance in the space with competitively priced and well-tuned devices, there has also been an influx of brands that are trying to find their footing in the space, making it a David vs Goliath kind of affair.

Paul DePasquale
CEO, Tivoli Audio

In times like these, when a new brand decides to make its entry in India, it is always interesting to know what pushed them to set foot in this competitive space. One such brand that recently started its operations in India is Tivoli Audio. The Americal audio brand is trying to find its way into India with some really interesting offerings. So, I spoke to their CEO, Paul DePasquale, about the brand's entry into India.

He said that Tivoli, being a brand that has a presence in a number of countries, coming from its roots in America, sees a lot of potential in India. Mr Paul also shared some inter-