

CS2 IS HERE!

AFTER MONTHS OF WAITING, WE FINALLY WALK INTO THE NEXT ERA OF COUNTER-STRIKE

By Satvik "SA1NT" Pandey | feedback@skoar.in

After giving us over 10 years of exciting gameplay, lore, and hours of fun, Counter-Strike: Global Offensive has finally been succeeded by the new Counter-Strike 2. The much-anticipated release of the latest edition to the Counter-Strike franchise comes after months of anticipation. It started with reports in March, with the Limited Test for Counter-Strike 2 starting on March 22, 2023.

The Counter-Strike franchise has been a staple in the world of eSports, especially FPS eSports, for over 20 years now. The game has been through several different iterations. CS 1.6, CS: Source, and Counter-Strike: Global Offensive are the three biggest ones to have been released.

Now, after a decade of CS:GO fun, and about half a year of testing the CS2 beta, we are finally entering a new era of Counter-Strike with the release of Counter-Strike 2.

What's new in CS2?

The biggest change in CS2, over CS:GO is the addition of the Source 2 game engine. This has brought in a host of new changes, including new lighting, smoke grenades, and many more quality-of-life changes which retain the essence of Counter-Strike, while giving the game a new feel.

Over the three months of testing, Valve had made several changes to the Beta, slowly adding players to the limited test. With the full release of Counter-Strike 2, Valve has enabled a number of already available features, and added some new content to the game. Here's a quick look at what has been added to CS2 –

- You can now open cases and stick-er capsules, do trade-ups, and modify the items in your inventory.
- Valve has enabled competitive matchmaking with each map having its own individual ranking system. Private matchmaking and Wingman matchmaking is also live.
- Players who played CS:GO, atleast a week before the launch of CS2 have been rewarded with the "Global Offensive Coin" and a CS:GO music kit, celebrating the legend from the past.
- Chickens now fall off the map, Vertigo 🐔