

Gaming phones stand as the undisputed powerhouses within the smartphone landscape. These devices boast of top-tier chipsets, sophisticated thermal management systems, and high-refresh-rate displays, all designed to deliver an unparalleled gaming experience anytime, anywhere. Their hardware configurations are also optimised to cater specifically to the demands of gaming, offering features like enhanced haptic feedback and, in some instances, haptic triggers that mimic the feel of console controllers, effectively transforming these smartphones into portable gaming consoles. In this year's Digit Zero1 and Best Buy Awards, we had some of the best smartphones in their own categories and budget segments. Between smartphones like the iPhone 15 Pro, iQOO 11, Poco F5, Honor 90, OnePlus 11R, and more, one smartphone swept both the Digit Zero1 and Digit Best Buy award.

Winner and Best Buy: iQOO 11

The iQOO 11 is a top-tier gaming smartphone, boasting exceptional features tailored for gaming enthusiasts. Fueled by the Qualcomm Snapdragon 8 Gen 2 chip and a whopping 16GB RAM, this phone stands true to iQOO's commitment to delivering high-speed performance for gaming aficionados. In direct comparison to the OnePlus 11R, which shares the same 16GB RAM but relies on last year's chip, the iQOO 11 maintains an impressive level of gaming prowess.

However, what truly distinguishes the iQOO 11 is its remarkable value proposition. Despite packing immense power under the hood, it comes with a price tag that is super competitive as compared to similar-specced devices from competitors. This harmonious balance between exceptional performance and affordability solidifies the iQOO 11 as the winner for both the Digit Zero1 and Digit Best Buy Award for the Best Gaming Smartphone category this year.

The iQOO 11 offers an unparalleled combination of top class performance and accessibility. For gaming enthusiasts looking for a smartphone that doesn't compromise on power or cost-effectiveness, the iQOO 11 emerges as the clear winner, delivering a remarkable gaming experience without the hefty price tag usually associated with these kinds of devices.

Runner Up: OnePlus 11R

The OnePlus 11R is OnePlus' high-end offering this year. The smartphone is like the little brother of the OnePlus 11, and it did really well in the Best Gaming Smartphone Category this year. The OnePlus 11R came in second place, just behind the iQOO 11, which is built specifically for gaming and high performance. Even though it's not the top winner, the OnePlus 11R packs a punch and offers fantastic value for your money.

Fueled by the Qualcomm Snapdragon 8+ Gen 1 SoC coupled with a robust 16GB of RAM, the OnePlus 11R excels in the gaming realm, catering exceptionally well to users who prioritise gaming on their smartphones. Its noteworthy performance isn't just about raw power; it also strikes a balance by offering this level of performance at a reasonable price. For gaming enthusiasts seeking a reliable, high-performance device without an exorbitant price tag, the OnePlus 11R stands as a solid choice.
