

A Sigh of Relief and a Gaming Spree

After the grueling two-month-long testing for the Digit Zero1 Awards, the office was filled with a collective sigh of relief. The air was thick with anticipation, not for more work, but for a gaming spree that was long overdue. The keyboards were no longer typing out reports and analyses; they were now the battlegrounds for virtual warriors. The office, once a hub of serious tech discussions, had transformed into a gaming arena. The sound of virtual gunfire and the cheers of victory echoed through the walls. The office was buzzing with excitement, the employees were high on adrenaline, and the atmosphere was electric.

Goodbye Counter-Strike, Hello Age of Mythology

Satvik, a die-hard fan of Counter-Strike and F1, finally decided to venture into new gaming territories. Thanks to Mithun's constant nagging about his monotonous gaming choices, and Manish and Prakrit's relentless pursuit for a third gaming partner, Satvik found himself installing Age of Mythology. The disappointment with Valve's Counter-Strike 2 was the final push he needed to explore new horizons. His journey into the world of mythology was filled with excitement and curiosity. He was like a child in a candy store, exploring the new game with wide-eyed wonder. The office watched in amusement as Satvik, the seasoned gamer, fumbled and stumbled in the new game. It was a sight to behold.

Dhriti's Minecraft Loyalty

In the midst of all this, Dhriti remained loyal to her first love, Minecraft. Despite having Age of Mythology installed on her PC, she chose to stick to her blocky landscapes and pixelated adventures. Her unwavering dedication to Minecraft was a testament to her love for the game. She was a true Minecraft enthusiast, building intricate structures and surviving the night against the creepers. Her virtual world was a place of creativity and imagination, a place where she could be the master of her own universe. The office admired her dedication and often teased her about her Minecraft obsession. But Dhriti was unfazed. She was in her element, and nothing could deter her.

Shoots, Shots, and More Shoots

However, the fun and games were short-lived as shoots resumed in full swing. The office was once again buzzing with activity, the screens filled with edits and cuts, and the air filled with the familiar sound of camera shutters. The grind, as they say, never stops. The team was back to their workstations, their focus shifted from virtual battles to real-world deadlines. The office was a whirlwind of activity, with everyone rushing to meet their targets. The gaming spree was a distant memory, replaced by the harsh reality of work. But the spirit of the office was undeterred. They took it in their stride, ready to face the challenges head-on.

The Mystery of the Spinning Chair

In the midst of all this chaos, there

Ali

I am back at the dab
#DabNation