

compared to that of the M3 Max MacBook Pro. However, both sets of speakers deliver sound very well at maximum volume without distortion. Overall, Yoga Slim 7i's speakers are good but not the best and yet not very far from it.

PERFORMANCE, BENCHMARK AND BATTERY LIFE

Coming to the heart of the matter, the best way I can summarise the performance of the Intel Core Ultra 7 is as a "big overhaul" from the previous generation. Different OEMs like HP, ASUS, Lenovo and others will tweak the Core Ultra chip as per their requirement. But better performance and efficiency are what you will get to see as a common theme with the new Intel CPUs.

For instance, among the three Core Ultra 7 laptops I tested, the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i comes out on top, beating both the HP Spectre x360 14 and the ASUS Zenbook 14 OLED. In terms of sustained performance as well, the Core Ultra 7 is a champ as it consistently maintained 34-36W CPU package power during a 10-minute throttle test.

The power draw is similar to the ASUS Zenbook 14 OLED and higher than the HP Spectre x360 14. However, the R23 throttle difference makes the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i the better-cooled laptop among the three. Although the HP Spectre x360 14 technically loses fewer points in the test, it's Core Ultra 7 chip only draws between 25-27W, which is relatively lower than both laptops.

Even the integrated Intel Arc GPU on the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i performs better than the other two laptops. In 3d Mark's Firestrike and TimeSpy GPU test, the Yoga Slim 7i came out on top. Moreover, in cross-platform GPU tests like Wildlife and Wildlife Extreme, the Yoga Slim 7i easily beats the competition by a good margin.

In the real world, this laptop will perform without any issues and very snappily even if you have multiple apps and Windows open. It has 32GB LPDDR5X RAM, which is more than enough and it is paired with a 1TB PCIe Gen 4 SSD. I'll get into the benchmarks of those two in a minute but in day-to-day use, they perform flawlessly.

Although, ever so often, I do hear the fans spin up whenever I run any big software like a game or any productivity tool. But the sound isn't very loud and it is also nice to know that the laptop is doing everything it can to lose as little performance as possible.

Coming to the benchmarks, the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i comes with 32GB LPDDR5X running at 7467MHz and in the AIDA 64 RAM test it delivered 83948 and 75456 MB/s memory read and write speed respectively. In terms of memory latency though, the Yoga Slim 7i came last compared to the other laptops.

All three laptops use a PCIe Gen4 SSD storage but the read and write speed of the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i is more than that of the ASUS Zenbook 14 OLED but less than that of HP Spectre x360 14.

Speaking of coming last, the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i delivered the lowest battery life when compared to the other two laptops. It draws similar power compared to the Zenbook 14 OLED but sadly has a smaller 54Wh battery compared to the 75Wh unit on its rival. One upside is that the 65W USB Type-C power brick that comes with both laptops charges the Yoga Slim 7i's battery relatively faster.

CONCLUSION

Like I said earlier in the review, the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i fills a very important gap in India's laptop market. It is relatively affordable than its much pricier competitor and the compromises it asks you to make are something most people can easily live with. The laptop is well-built and has a great keyboard, a decent display and great performance. The Yoga Slim 7i delivers more power and handles the thermal stress that comes with it even better. Needless to say, if you're ready to spend Rs 1 lakh for a thin and light laptop, then the Lenovo Yoga Slim 7i is probably your only (at least at the time of writing) and the best option in the Indian market.

—Yetnesh Dubey

SPECIFICATIONS

Processor: Intel Core Ultra 7 155H featuring 16 cores and 22 threads and a boost clock speed of 4.8GHz | Graphics: Intel Arc graphics @2.25 GHz with Direct X 12.1 and HDMI 2.1 support | RAM: 32GB LPDDR5X RAM | Storage: 1TB PCIe Gen 4 SSD | Display: 14-inch 1200p OLED 16:10 Aspect Ratio screen | Battery: 54Wh | Weight: 1.3kg

CONTACT

Company Name: Lenovo | Phone: +91-80-30533000 for the main office. | Email: N/A | Website: www.lenovo.com/in/en | Office Address: Ferns Icon, Level, 2, Outer Ring Rd, Doddanekundi, Mahadevapura, Bengaluru, Karnataka 560037, India