

Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS Earbuds

Amazing sound, coupled with a timeless design and robust features

Joining the closely contested space of premium TWS earbuds, along with offerings from Jabra, Apple, and Sony, to name a few, is the Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS earbuds. Whenever a pair of earbuds joins the fray of flagship earbuds, there are countless eyeballs on it, with each of them looking at that pair of earbuds with an extra bit of criticality. When these earbuds showed up at the Digit Test Centre, I knew what to look at right off the bat. When I put them through our test process, some really interesting findings came to light. So, without wasting much time, let's have a look at the review of the Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS –

SENNHEISER MOMENTUM 4 TWS CARRY A TIMELESS DESIGN

As I mentioned in my review of the last three Sennheiser products, the Accentum, Accentum Plus, and the HD 490 PRO headphones, the brand has adopted the philosophy of – What ain't broke, don't fix it. The case of the buds has a familiar boxy design, borrowing from the Sennheiser Momentum 3 TWS, which I personally find a bit bulky but doesn't bother a lot of people. The case is covered with ash-coloured fabric, giving it a premium and durable feel. The overall build of the case is strong, and the hinge and magnets on the case are strong and instil confidence in the buyer that these earbuds are meant to last.

Coming to the buds themselves, Sennheiser has maintained the design from its CX and Momentum line of TWS earbuds. The Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS earbuds come with a fit, and to ensure that you are cent per cent confident that they fit well, the brand has included three different sizes of concha fins, which will help you fit the buds well in your outer ear's concha. They do stick out quite a bit, and people with small ears might find them a bit too big right off the bat. However, the weight of the buds, in combination with the variety of tips and fins provided with them, ensures that everyone finds the right fit for the buds. Once you believe you have found the right combination of the tips and fins, run the ear tip fit test from the Sennheiser Smart Control App.

₹19,990

In terms of the material and the overall aesthetic of the buds, they are easy on the eyes, with subtle branding and metallic accents on the outside, which ensures that you get the right combination of subtlety and flair. There's not much to complain about here.

LOADED WITH ALL THE FEATURES YOU NEED

The Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS are loaded with features. You get Auracast, which enables you to tune into compatible PSA systems that will ensure you do not miss your flight announcements at airports. You get customisable sound in the Sennheiser Smart Control app, the 5-band built-in EQ, sound modes, and Sound Zones.

You have support for Qi Wireless charging, and if you are a fan of lossless audio, then you are in luck as these earbuds pack in SBC, AAC, aptX, aptX Adaptive/Lossless, and LC3 CODECs which ensure that you are getting the best listening experience all the time.

The effectiveness of these features, like personalised sound customisation, will vary from person to person, given the subjectivity of sound and their likeness towards the results that they get. But, in my experience, all the creature comforts that Sennheiser has baked into these earbuds are on point and will not disappoint anyone who is looking for a pair of feature-rich earbuds. The buds aced our features rating, and there is nothing to complain about.

PERFORMANCE

In terms of performance, the Sennheiser Momentum 4 TWS does not disappoint. Let's start by having a look at the sound signature of the buds. As you can see, the sound signature is fairly well-balanced. Out of the box, the sound has a boost in the lows and the highs, with the mids coming fairly close to our baseline, the pink noise reading that we refer to while scoring any audio device. The closer it is, the better.

When you are listening to the buds, the sound is immersive, and with a bit of tweaking in the EQ you can enjoy basically any form of content. And, with the personalisation kicking in, after you have done the tests from the Smart Control app, you will see a noticeable