

Triumphs, Tears, and Transfers

Change is inevitable and a necessary evil, they say. Well, it was something that everyone in Team Digit, both in Mumbai and Noida were faced with this month. It had to be the anniversary month!

As you might have read in Soham's column, Digit is now a part of Times Network. New beginnings, same of geeks. Soham has spoken about it in detail, but to start things off, here's a look at how things panned out in the Digit Test Centres when the news first broke -

A new dawn: Farewell to the familiar

In the bustling office of Digit in Mumbai and Noida, a wave of anticipation washed over the team. The air was thick with excitement and a hint of nostalgia as they embarked on a new journey post-acquisition by Times Network.

The office buzzed with chatter, laughter, and the clinking of coffee mugs, a symphony of camaraderie that echoed through the corridors of the offices.

Vikas, the stalwart leader, was bidding adieu, leaving behind a legacy of leadership. The team, though excited about the future, found it hard to let go of the past. The farewell was bittersweet, a cocktail of emotions that left everyone with a lump in their throat and a twinkle in their eye.

The Suika showdown

Just when the office was recovering from the emotional rollercoaster, the Suika Game took center stage. It was a storm that swept everyone off their feet, a whirlwind of competition and camaraderie. The leaderboard was a battlefield, and the warriors were armed with determination and dexterity, or mouse clicking abilities to be precise.

Prakrit, the undisputed champion, sat atop the leaderboard, his score a towering testament to his gaming prowess. Manish was hot on his heels, his eyes on the prize. Satvik and Dhriti, the dynamic duo, were close contenders, their scores a hair's breadth away from the top. Mithun, despite his valiant efforts, couldn't cross the elusive 1500 points mark, but his spirit remained unbroken.

A tale of two cities

Amidst the gaming frenzy, Satvik was preparing for a journey of his own. He was shifting bases from Mumbai to Noida, a transition that was met with mixed emotions.

The Mumbai team bid him a teary farewell, their hearts heavy with goodbyes but light with good wishes. As Satvik set foot in Noida, he was welcomed with open arms. The Noida team, eager to make him feel at home, greeted him with warm smiles and hearty handshakes. It was a new chapter in Satvik's life, a fresh start in a familiar setting.

In the grand scheme of things, it was just another month at Digit. But for the people who lived these moments, it is a day of new beginnings, fond farewells, and friendly rivalries. A month that would be etched in their memories, a day that encapsulated the essence of Digit - a place where work is fun, colleagues are family, and every day is an adventure.

Here's to new beginnings!

The Suika Master?

He can't help but look over and over at his own scores
