

Avneet Singh Marwah CEO, SPPL, Exclusive brand licensee of Blaupunkt TVs, India

Inside Blaupunkt India's strategy

Avneet Singh Marwah on innovations, market positioning, and the future of Blaupunkt TV sales in India

Dhriti Datta | dhriti@digit.in

In an exclusive interview with Avneet Singh Marwah, CEO of Super Plastronics Pvt. Ltd (SPPL), the company that holds the exclusive brand license for Blaupunkt TVs in India, we delved into the strategic moves and innovations driving the brand's success in the highly competitive Indian TV market. Marwah shared insights on SPPL's role in tailoring Blaupunkt TVs to meet the specific needs of Indian consumers while maintaining global standards. He highlighted the company's strong position in the 4K and QLED segments, its response to market dynamics in the 32-inch category, and the significant growth in online sales. Additionally, Marwah discussed the incorporation of cutting-edge technologies like Mini LED and AI-driven features in future models, the use of Google TV as the operating system, and SPPL's robust in-house manufacturing capabilities. The conversation also touched upon how SPPL is addressing the rising demand for larger screen TVs, outlining the strategies in place to cater to this growing market segment. Let's delve deeper into the conversation.

Q Could you please shed some light on Blaupunkt TVs in India and how Super Plastronics Pvt. Ltd (SPPL) plays a part in its sales in India?

A Blaupunkt TVs have carved out a niche in the Indian market by offering high-quality, feature-rich products. Super Plastronics Pvt. Ltd (SPPL) plays a crucial role as the brand licensee for Blaupunkt in India. We handle everything from marketing and distribution to customer service and after-sales support. Our team ensures that Blaupunkt TVs are tailored to meet the preferences and needs of Indian consumers, incorporating local insights into our product offerings. We're dedicated to maintaining the brand's international standards while adapting to local market demands, which helps us deliver exceptional value and performance to our customers.