

This game is designed for kids between 2 to 5 years of age. The game's simple dynamic allows for a lot such as packing suitcases with odd items, choosing from a variety of vehicles and even doing a car wash or fuel refill. There are no strict rules for driving and kids can take any route, including the sky, to reach their destinations. A cute game for cute toddlers.

Forestry

Price: Free

OS: iOS

Forestry offers up a surprisingly wide range of activities for kids that relate to the real world. The educational set up of the game focuses on children learning how to live in the wild. The activities include how to build a house, gathering food, going swimming and setting up a sleep camp. The game is useful to help build memory skills and attention. The game does come with in-app purchases to parents need to take precautions.

Virtuoso Piano

Price: Free

OS: iOS

Although this app isn't designed for young kids, it does have great value in a musical household. If any of the parents or siblings know how to play the piano, this app is of great use in getting younger ones on board (with volume control). Young kids can learn basic key positions on limited octaves using the whole of the tablet screen. It is also useful to teach young kids about music in general.

Dumb Ways To Die

Price: Free

OS: iOS and Android

Although everyone knows Dumb Ways to Die as a funny viral video of how not to get killed, in its app form, it is rib ticklingly awesome. Kids enjoy the animated character and the music, which teaches them

