There are times when one feels kinda disillusioned with this whole thing called reality. Like when you learn that a reality show that involves nothing but people calling each other names and generally trying to make life miserable for the rest of the participants has earned a super-high TPR rating. Or when a politician makes a statement so blatantly ignorant, you begin to instinctively reach your hands to cover your child's ears whenever the person appears on television from that point on. The exclamation on your lips at such points is this: "This is so unreal!" Yes, reality has a way of appearing to be too absurd to be real at times.
