

on both camera technology and software. They have also partnered with some of the biggest names in the broadcast industry. In other words, in the arena of games, they are bound to be a game changer.

12. Merge VR

Some say that Merge VR is a spinoff of Google Cardboard but that's a mistake. For while the firm based in San Antonio, Texas does create a smart-phone based mobile HMD, Merge is still distinct from most mobile phone HMDS: owing to the fact that it come with a proprietary motion controller. The controller is compatible with both Android and iOS and can act as a head tracking motion sensor. The controller is mounted on the side of the headset. And yes, it looks kinda cool.

13. Reload Studios

If you are a businessman, you're probably missing out on a huge opportunity by not producing a device that would scratch the itch of those gamers who simply cannot wait to get their hands on Virtual Reality games. And LA based Reload Studios could take out that chance for good if you wait too
