

Search Engine Optimization + Search Engine Marketing + Social Media Optimization = High Return On Investment

Social media management as a career

Many scoff at the idea of social media management or marketing as a career choice. However a social media management or marketing specialist needs to have more experience than just setting up social accounts across Facebook and Twitter. They need to have an understanding of social personas, social content planning, social research and development, social monitoring and social analytics tools. For those just starting out experience can be acquired by personal marketing and pro bono work for a non-profit or small business. Attending Social Media Meetups and Joining networks helps immensely as you get to meet professionals in your field and build your network. Here the making relationships with as few as two people would count more than just meeting a dozen. Finding ways to be creative and not monotonous is important. 