

A great way to connect with your audience, that's what this is all about traversing harsh terrains. The brand, TOMS appealed to the philanthropic zeal of their audience and asked them to snap and share a picture of their bare feet on instagram. For each such picture, the brand would donate one pair of shoes to the less fortunate.

Smart tips to create great social content

At the outset itself, let it be made clear that there are no sure-shot methods to create social content that will go, well, social. If only life were that simple! More often than not, it's a combination of your intuitive knowledge of human behaviour and a deep familiarisation with the social media platforms that would help you create kickass content. But that's not to say that there aren't certain simple tips that would help you get closer to creating content that's prone to go viral.

1. Appeal to your audience's motivation to connect to each other, and not just with your brand

While it's obvious that a social media content becomes a hit only if it is shared between a fairly large number of people, the fact is that when most brands try to engage an audience on a social platform, most of the times they try to engage the audience with the brand. That pattern of communication is a carry-over from pre-social media days when the brand had to do all the work when it comes to spreading a message. However, these days, with a highly connected audience, you have a willing group of people who